Kennedy Hits Laxity at Sea, Calls Mutiny 'Scandalous'

Labor Situation in U. S. Merchant Marine Is 'Bad,' He Says.

Wage Raise Fixed For 10,000 Seamen

Inquiry Launched Into Strikes and Murder on Algic's Voyage.

By Edward T. Folliard

Chairman Joseph P. Kennedy, of the Maritime Commission, yesterday characterized the rebellious behavior of the crew of the S. S. Algic, Government-owned freighter, as "scandalous." At the same time, he said that the general labor situation in the Merchant Marine was "very definitely bad."

Chairman Kennedy's remarks came after he had announced the fixing of minimum wage scales and provision for better living conditions for 10,000 officers and men on Government-subsidized lines.

Meantime the National Maritime Union, a C. I. O. affiliate, described the "fanciful tale" about the Algic's cruise as "part of an effort to break a legitimate labor union engaged in wholly lawful pursuits." It referred to Chairman Kennedy's order to place the Algic sailors in irons if they refused to obey orders as "notorious," and insisted he had "no authority under the law to issue such an order."

Inquiry Launched.

The N. M. U., which had organized the Algic crew 100 per cent, said the crew "conducted itself in disciplined and orderly fashion."

In Baltimore, where the Algic docked Wednesday, the Federal Bureau of Marine Inspection and Navigation began an investigation of the ship's tumultous 13,000-mile trip to South America, a journey marked by an alleged mutiny, a murder, the drowning of a deserter and two sit-down strikes.

Commander R. S. Fields, chief of the Bureau of Navigation, said that the board of inquiry would concern itself with the question of whether any of the Commerce Department certificates held by crew members should be revoked.

"However," he added, "if we uncover anything of a criminal nature it will be cited to the Department of Justice for further investigation."

Captain Testifies.

Capt. Joseph Gainard, master of the Algic, a war-time Navy officer who was on the U. S. S. Lincoln when she was torpedoed, was the first witness. At the outset of the Algic's trip, the crew launched a sit-down strike because Capt. Gainard and other officers refused to join a maritime union. They struck again in Montevideo, Uruguay, because of a strike of native longshoremen, and agreed to work only after Chairman Kennedy, of the Maritime Commission, cabled instructions to "place them in irons" if they refused to obey orders.

Blames Poor Quarters.

In his press conference, Chairman Kennedy said that poor living quarters and insanitary conditions aboard American ships had been a major factor in the disturbed labor situation. But he conceded that he didn't know whether an improvement in this respect would end the turmoil.

Kennedy said that widespread "lack of discipline" was largely responsible for the bad labor picture, and he revealed that the Maritime Commission had received a great number of complaints from passengers on American ships. These, he said, told of insolent conduct on the part of stewards and crew members.

"There was the case, for example," Kennedy said, "of a young married couple that was crossing on an American ship. A steward came up, took the wife by the arm, walked her over to another man

Gay Stresses Need for More Capital Outlets

Exchange Head Declares Need for New Fields Is Desperate.

By the Associated Press.

New York, Oct. 21.—Charles R. Gay, president of the New York Stock Exchange, said tonight the Nation "is in more desperate need of having its avenues for capital expansion opened up than at any time since the war."

Addressing the fiftieth anniversary banquet of the American Institute of Accountants, Gay declared the recovery from the depression "requires us to replace plant equipment worn out in famine years, and to build up new productive capacity to provide for new demands."

Urges Co-operation.

"These processes of expansion and the movement of private capital into productive investment," he said, "are inadequate in terms of our current needs. Can there be any doubt that the time has come to encourage and foster business development and the individual initiative without which that development cannot take place? It is my conviction that only through this means can the full and necessary measure of recovery be realized.

"To this all-important objective I suggest that Government, finance and industry, in a spirit of genuine understanding and co-operation, direct their most earnest efforts to the successful pursuit of a common program."

Capital Below Normal.

For nearly eight years, Gay continued, "production has been below normal, and the creating of new wealth has been grievously curtailed. New capital obtained by industry through capital flotations last year, for example, amounted to a billion and two hundred million dollars. In 1933 it amounted to only $161,000,000. These figures compared with annual totals just before the depression, ranging from $4,500,000,000 to nearly $9,000,000,000.

"That important shortages of productive wealth now exist is generally conceded, and, indeed, during the past year, the practical current capacity of this Nation to produce goods has been substantially employed.

"Such recovery from the depression as has thus far been experienced has been, in large measure, due not so much to the expanding pay rolls that attend new construction as to the stimulation of consumers' buying by the disbursement of Federal funds."

Against this background, Gay said,

Belgian Riders Step Into Lead As Society Sees Horse Show

Invading Army Team Performs Sensationally in Inter-American Event at Meadowbrook; Diplomats Turn Out Almost En Masse.

A daring group of Belgian army riders, their khaki coats whisking behind them in the cool breeze of a leaden afternoon, took the lead in the military class competition as the Inter-American Horse Show opened at the Meadowbrook Saddle Club yesterday.

Dancing in the precision of a schooled Russian ballet, the invaders' mounts performed intricate formations easily and beautifully, to win the acclaim of a large gathering of leaders in Washington's diplomatic, business, social and Government circles.

The show took on a completely international flavor as members of Washington's corps of diplomats, many of them seldom seen except at official functions, turned out almost en masse to watch horses' hooves pound over the Maryland mud.

The bright sport clothes of the diplomats and of Washington social leaders stood out sharply against the smart simplicity of Army officer's uniforms and the riding clothes worn habitually by the horse enthusiasts.

But despite the number of celebrities attending, the show was still more of a sporting event than a social parade. Even the most blase holders of the $100 boxes leaped to their feet and cheered when a good horse took his jumps faultlessly.

The social celebrities forsook their caviar for the afternoon and munched contentedly at hot dogs. The money from the sale of the hot dogs and of milk—which was drunk directly from bottles—went toward the fund to provide lunches for hungry school children.

Chiefs Must Go To James to Get President's Ear

18 Agencies Will Lay Problems Before Secretarial Son First.

Towering James Roosevelt yesterday was set up as a buffer between his father, the President, and heads of 18 independent agencies in the executive department of the Government.

Hereafter, the agency heads will each have 30 minutes weekly in which to lay before the President's son and secretary any matters they desire to bring to the attention of the Chief Executive. It will be James' duty to route to subordinates all of the difficulties and problems that can be so handled, thereby relieving the President of some of what has often been called the "killing details" of the Presidency.

Agency heads, it was made clear, must talk fast and convincingly to James to get their cases into his father's office. At the same time, the son will be attempting to co-ordinate the work of all the agencies preventing overlapping or duplicating that occasionally has occurred in the past.

Inaugurating his new function, James had the agency heads at a White House luncheon yesterday at

County Doctor Uses 'Elixir;' Six Lose Lives

Pastor Is One of Victims of Miss. Physician's Prescription.

By the Associated Press.

Mount Olive, Miss., Oct. 21.—Dr. A. S. Calhoun, Covington County health officer, reported tonight the death of six patients for whom he said he had innocently prescribed a new elixir.

The veteran physician said one was his dearest friend, the Rev. J. E. Byrd, State Baptist Sunday school board secretary, who died at Knoxville, Tenn., today.

Dr. Calhoun reported six others who took varying doses of elixir of sulfanilamide upon his prescription "have shown no ill effects." He expressed belief they would survive.

"But they are like people facing a death sentence," he said. "Nobody knows what tomorrow may bring."

Dr. Calhoun said the patients first

Beauty-Mad Age Makes Health Aid Futile, Expert Says

New York, Oct. 21 (AP).—Dr. Haven Emerson, director of public health of the College of Physicians and Surgeons, wonders if it is worth while attempting to protect beauty-mad women.

"As one looks about," he said in an address last night, "at the cadaveric finger tips the enamelled toenails, the deformed eyebrows, the filled facial creases that try to reveal character but are cheated out of it, the hectic cheek reminiscent of the fever ward of a tuberculosis hospital, the ill-assorted daubs of aniline upon the lips, one wonders it it is worth the while of the congress to try to enact protective legislation, or health officers and their laboratories to attempt enforcement of local ordinances, to save the beauty-mad generation from those qualities of cosmetics that threaten to replace the bloom of health with one more appropriate to a dish of wax fruit."

Chilly Capitol Waits Congress In Strike of Air Conditioners

By Robert C. Albright.

Congress awaits a chilly reception at the Capitol when it returns to keep its special session tryst with the President November 15, unless a speedy settlement can be reached with some 430 union strikers.

Several committee rooms, the Speaker's office, the press gallery and other key points in the Capitol are without heat and will be without heat until workers return and finish connecting the new $4,000,000 heating and air-conditioning system.

Architect of the Capitol David Lynn admitted last night the Capitol was faced with a "heating emergency" unless the dispute is adjusted. He called another conference this morning with John M. Botts, representative of the Steamfitters and Helpers Association Local 602.

There was even some talk about carrying the dispute to the White House, according to Botts, who said he was perfectly willing to lay his case before the President.

The trouble started September 16, when the steamfitters struck in pro-

'Tell Truth!' Widow Begs 'Lady in Red'

Girl, 20, Asserts She Slew Reeves Only to Escape Attack.

Slain Man Assaulted Her Previously, Expectant Mother Declares.

By the Associated Press.

New Brunswick, N. J., Oct. 21.—Testimony at Margaret Drennan's murder trial closed on its most dramatic note today as Paul Reeves' widow pleaded from the witness box for the defendant, a 20-year-old secretarial student and expectant mother, to "tell the truth" for the sake of the Reeves' two children.

Just as Prosecutor Charles M. Morris dismissed the attractive widow, called as a rebuttal witness, with a "That's all," Mrs. Reeves arose and exclaimed:

"No, it's not all. Margaret, please tell the truth. They have got to know. I have two children. Some day they have got to know the truth. Please, I beg you."

Defendent Is Calm.

One of the calmest persons in the startled courtroom was Miss Drennan, who in three hours of testimony earlier in the day said she shot Reeves, 25-year-old mill worker, in his dark Iselin bungalow the night of September 7 to ward off an attack.

In a low, sometimes wavering and scarcely audible voice, the dark-haired Miss Drennan said she believed she was about to become a mother as the result of an earlier attack, and so took her father's revolver for protection when she went to Reeves home to tell him about it.

Twice the defendent stood in front of the jury box and pointed a pistol at the prosecutor to demonstrate her position when she killed Reeves. Testimony of other witnesses placed his two children in an adjoining bedroom and Mrs. Reeves at the theater at the time.

Widow's Mother Sobs.

As Mrs. Reeves shouted to the defendent today to "tell the truth," there rose above the ensuing hubbub the voice of the widow's mother, Mrs. John Houlroyd, sobbing from the second row of spectators, "Myra, oh, Myra."

Mrs. Peeves disappeared in the passageway behind the jury box and fainted in the arms of a court attendant. Miss Drennan went to the hospital room of Middlesex County Jail where the warden said she complained of a headache.

The case will go to a jury of 11 men and one woman tomorrow after the lawyers' summations and Judge Adrian Lyon's charge.

Sticks to Story.

Miss Drennan never wavered from her story that Reeves represented himself to her first as a single man named Jack Lyons, behaved "like a gentleman" until an automobile ride on August 7 when she said he attacked her, then told her his real name and threatened to kill her if she told anyone.

Miss Drennan told Prosecutor Morris she had seen Mrs. Reeves "around town" but did not know her by name. Mrs. Reeves said she was accompanied by her husband and children on two occasions when she met Miss Drennan.

Tells of Struggle.

Miss Drennan said as she entered the Reeves home September 7. "I saw him sitting nude on the couch."

"I no sooner saw him than he jumped right at me, and he held me so very tight around my body up near my chest. It was awful."

She said she broke away from Reeves after a struggle and tried without success to open the back door.

"I put my hand in my pocket and it seemed to me like when he saw the gun he seemed to duck at me and I shot," she said.

Japan Hurls 200,000 Men Into 'Showdown' Battle for Shanghai

Marine Says He Slew Davidson To Save Himself, Police Claim

Aberdeen, Md., Youth Named by Officers Held at Quantico.

WALTER L. ROSS.

An 18-year-old Quantico Marine, identified by Virginia State police as Walter L. Ross, of Aberdeen, Md., was held by military authorities last night in the slaying of Elmer J. Davidson, United States Chamber of Commerce research expert.

Arrested by State Police Sergt. E. J. McDermott, whose ceaseless efforts to "break" the baffling case led him on a lone manhunt through three States and the District, the youth was turned over to Quantico officers pending a further check of his movements since October 4, when Davidson was found shot and stabbed on lonely Widewater road near Triangle, Va.

Faced with evidence gathered by Sergeant McDermott, Ross reportedly confessed to the crime, giving "self defense" as his motive. McDermott said the confession was "complete in every detail."

According to the confession, as outlined by McDermott, Ross met Davidson by prearrangement on the night of the murder at a spot not far from Quantico. They drove to the secluded and desolate murder scene, parked beneath a tree and sat several minutes talking, it was reported.

Their conversation finally grew into a violent argument, the alleged confession detailed, and the argument developed into a scuffle. Ross reportedly admitted that he then fired one shot, when Davidson drew a knife and tried to stab him.

Ross, it was learned, told Sergeant McDermott he had been in Davidson's company "on numerous other occasions."

A revolver was found in Ross' Aberdeen home, and an empty shell

North Station Site Of Bitter Struggle

Nippon's Storm Troops Plunge Into Flames But Are Repelled.

Copyright, 1937, by the United Press.

Shanghai, (Friday) Oct. 22.—More than a half million men were locked in furious combat along a 20-mile front today in what both Japanese and Chinese military leaders predicted would be a "showdown battle for Shanghai."

The Japanese high command, informed by diplomatic leaders that it must win a major victory before the meeting of the Nine-Power Treaty nations in Brussels next week, ordered every resource thrown into the battle to drive the Chinese off the Yangtse Delta.

Gen. Iwane Matsui, supreme commander of Japanese military forces on the Shanghai front, took personal charge of the new offensive in which nearly 200,000 Japanese are engaged.

The Chinese, with almost twice as many men, replied with a general counter-offensive along the entire Shanghai front.

As dawn broke today over a fire-reddened city, after a night of some of the fiercest fighting of the war, the Chinese appeared to be holding their own. Military experts estimated 7,000 casualties on both sides, about equally divided.

The fiercest struggle was at the North Station, within a few blocks of the International Settlement, where the Japanese batteries opened an artillery duel that reverberated over the city.

In the wake of the artillery barrage, Japanese detachments plunged through a flaming inferno, set by their own shells, in a desperate effort to take the station. The Chinese, entrenched in shell craters and the wreckage of buildings that have been pounded incessantly since the war started, drove them back.

Decisive Victory Needed.

A Japanese Embassy spokesman admitted the Japanese were badly in need of a conclusive result in the long-drawn Shanghai fighting.

"Many Japanese share the feeling the Japanese army must win a decisive victory at Shanghai before peace negotiations are entered into," he said.

The "peace negotiations" will be considered at the Nine Power meeting at Brussels on October 30.

Indicating the gravity with which Japan regards the situation, Gen. Matsui and Vice Admiral Koyoshi Hasegawa, commanding the third Japanese battle fleet stationed at Shanghai, were understood to have conferred at length last night.

Shortly afterward, the military command said it was ready to open

Postage Stamp Threatens War; U. S. Offers Aid

3 Nations Seek Mediation as Nicaragua, Honduras Dispute Boundary.

By William V. Nessly.

Flaring over a postage stamp, a threatened war in Central America last night brought formal action by the United States and two other American republics, seeking to avert hostilities.

Armies of Honduras and Nicaragua were on the march. Neighboring countries reported the situation ominous. All of South America watched with concern the first approach of war since the All-American Peace Conference at Buenos Aires last December.

The United States, it was announced by Sumner Welles, Undersecretary of State, offered its good offices to settle the dispute. Venezuela, in South America, and Costa Rica, in Central America, joined in the offer of action for peace.

Both sides have indicated acceptance of the offer, and last night diplomats of the three interceding nations were drafting a program to restore good will.

Long-Standing Dispute.

The dispute is a long-standing disagreement over the boundary between the two countries. The King of Spain, as arbiter, issued an award in 1906. Honduras accepted, but Nicaragua never has. In 1931 a protocol was agreed to. Honduras ratified, but the Nicaraguan Congress greatly modified it.

There the matter has rested until Nicaragua recently issued a new series of postage stamps bearing a map which showed some of the disputed territory within Nicaragua. Tempers flamed again. In both countries there were reports

Asturian Revolt Delivers Gijon To Insurgents

Franco Expects to Send Men South for Death Blow to Government.

By the Associated Press.

San Sebastian, Oct. 21.—Gijon, last government seaport on the northern coast of Spain, surrendered today to the insurgent armies after an internal rebellion. An insurgent brigade marched in this afternoon.

Almost at once the last opposition to the insurgent forces in the north crumbled all over the province of Asturias.

After a night of great excitement but little bloodshed in the city, the Gijon radio suddenly announced that insurgent sympathizers had taken over the city and were awaiting arrival of the insurgent forces then ploughing down the coast about 4 miles away.

Rebels Press Beyond City.

Only a few hours later—3:30 p. m.—the first units of Generalissimo Francisco Franco's fourth brigade of Navarrese troops came down the coastal road from the east and entered the city amidst tremendous excitement.

The Navarrese pressed straight on through the city, crossed the Nalon River and continued on toward Aviles, a city of 13,000 inhabitants about 13 miles down the coast.

As the insurgents gave themselves over to rejoicing their military leaders counted today's victory as the greatest scored by Franco's troops in the 15 months of war.

Not only will a complete cleanup of secondary phases of the north-

Blaze Levels Block In Sykesville; Loss Is Put at $50,000

Sykesville, Md., Oct. 21 (AP).—Firemen from seven towns fought more than three hours today before controlling a blaze which destroyed almost a block of buildings in the business section here. Firemen estimated damage at $50,000.

Four stores were destroyed and several damaged. High winds threatened to spread the flames to a large warehouse filled with stock feed, but thousands of gallons of water pumped from the Patapsco River saved the building.

Lack of water hampered firemen as engine pumps clogged when lines first were dropped into the Patapsco.

N. Y. Police Given $674,209 in Bonds Too 'Hot' to Keep

New York, Oct. 21 (AP).—Thirteen stolen Treasury bonds valued at $674,209, which proved too "hot" for disposal here or abroad, were recovered from a lock box in a crowded subway station today.

Authorities were directed to the box by an anonymous note. The bonds were part of the $1,456,000 loot stolen from a Bank of Manhattan messenger, January 28, 1935. Their serial numbers had been broadcast throughout the world.

Montague Identified by Felon In Court as His Holdup Aide

By the Associated Press.

Elizabethtown, N. Y., Oct. 21.—A former convict sat in a little mountain courtroom today and calmly pointed to John Montague, Hollywood's gift to golf, as the "Laverne Moore" who joined him in a $700 roadhouse robbery near here seven years ago.

The identification came from 35-year-old Roger Norton, Cleveland (Ohio), truck driver, who served two years for the crime after pleading guilty.

In a voice hardly audible to the jury, Norton unhesitatingly pointed toward on Montague, on trial for robbery, when State Prosecutor Thomas W. McDonald asked: "Do you see Laverne Moore in the court room?"

The husky Montague admits he is Laverne Moore, formerly of Syracuse, N. Y., but denies participation in the crime.

Earlier, Kin Hana, bespectacled Japanese proprietor of the roadhouse, told in broken English of what happened near Jay, N. Y., the August night in 1930 when he and members of his family were bound and gagged while three men stripped their pockets and a safe of approximately $700. He said his assailants were masked.

Budget Plans Provide Steady D. C. Tax Rise

Program Indicates Annual Increase for 7 Years to $56,000,000.

Following is another of the series of articles on the District tax problem. The final article by Auditor Daniel J. Donovan, explaining why new taxes are necessary, will be published tomorrow.

By James D. Secrest.

The District will need increasing revenue each year for the next seven years if the 1939-45 budget being studied by the District tax committee is to be followed in drafting a new tax program.

Figures submitted to the committee by Auditor Donovan, not yet disclosed, are understood to point to the necessity for finding revenue that will step up each year to meet constantly mounting operating costs. The $50,000,000 budget recommended for the next fiscal year, it is indicated, will be the lowest of the seven years. The top may exceed $56,000,000, including highway and water fund appropriations.

Maj. Donovan, who tomorrow will discuss the reasons why new taxes are necessary in the concluding article in The Post series, yesterday stated that figures on the seven-year budget as published were unofficial. The report will not be made public, he said, until after it is submitted to the commissioners at a conference between the tax committee and the District heads tomorrow.

7 Years, 350 Millions.

Expenditures of the District government over the next seven years, as contemplated by the long-range budget, probably will exceed $350,000,000.

The committee is concerned, however, only with the general fund revenue and is not considering any increase in the taxes on motor vehicles, gasoline or water consumers.

The general fund budget for the next fiscal year is approximately $42,000,000 and this, too, will mount yearly if the seven-year plan is followed. While no official figure is available, it is believed that officials are counting on an average expenditure from the general fund of about $45,000,000.

This contemplated expenditure, however, will be stepped up each year from the $42,000,000 proposed for next year to possibly $50,000,000 in 1945.

Ten Consider New Taxes.

The committee at its conference with the Commissioners tomorrow will submit a list of new taxes considered and ask for instructions before proceeding to draft them in legislative form.

The tax proposals listed in The Post's referendum are still in the forefront of committee consideration, it was said. So far the investigators have found no other major source of revenue which will eliminate all three of the controversial levies an income tax, a sales tax, and the business privilege tax.

Whatever tax program is evolved, it appears, will be based primarily on one of these three revenue-producers.

The committee is studying other minor levies as supplementary, however. Among these are a small tax on beer, which would produce only a few hundred thousand dollars, and an increase in the tax on public utilities to provide well under $1,000,000.

Members of the tax committee are indicating again their preference for the sales tax, which they recommended last year, but they are frankly afraid that Congress would reject it, as it did last year.

Working for Washington

Head of Engineers Chapter Is Active in Civic Planning

KENNETH P. ARMSTRONG.

Kenneth P. Armstrong, Delegate to Citizens Federation, Fought Proposed Jefferson Memorial for Tidal Basin; Advocates Anacostia Stadium.

By Christine Sadler.

When the Federation of Citizens' Associations needs specialized information on public works, city planning, and kindred subjects it calls on its two delegates from the Washington Chapter of the American Association of Engineers.

One of these, for the past nine years, has been Kenneth P. Armstrong, who is the Chapter's new president and who has been active in local civic work ever since he moved to the District 21 years ago.

As chairman of the Federation's city planning committee, he had a hand in opposing the proposed Jefferson Memorial for the Tidal Basin site and in advocating the plan of the Park and Planning Commission for a stadium at the foot of East Capitol street on the Anacostia River.

As the new president of the Engineers he will continue work of that organization to secure legislation for registration as a prerequisite to the practice of engineering. He feels that membership in the Federation gives the Engineers a beneficial civic contact.

"Members of the Washington Chapter value their connection with organized citizenship, and endeavor to contribute in every specialized way possible," he said.

Works For Treasury.

Armstrong's regular job is being architectural engineer for the Treasury Department, a position he has filled for seven years. From 1922 until 1930 he was in the real estate and building business in the "Woodridge" section. He has lived in the same house, at 1513 Kearney street, northeast, ever since he moved to Washington and has been closely associated with the growth of that part of the city.

He came to the District from Massachusetts in 1916 as valuation engineer for the Interstate Commerce Commission. One of the hardest crosses he has had to bear since that time has been the fact that he cast his last vote in 1920.

Needless to say, he favors local suffrage. He helped organize the new District of Columbia Suffrage Association, and he believes its objectives can be reached "if we go after them in the right way." Unlike many of his associates, however, he has little enthusiasm for the idea of national representation for the District. He considers the constitutional amendment necessary to bring that about "almost an impossibility."

"District people have been working for national representation for years without getting anywhere," he declares.

Joined Group in 1916.

Armstrong joined the Rhode Island Avenue Citizens Association in 1916. In 1929 he became a charter member of the new Burroughs association, of which he was the president in 1931 and where he still has his membership.

He graduated from the Massachusetts Institute of Technology in 1910, as a civil engineer, and was president of the Washington Society of the Institute in 1930.

He also gives of his time to the Masons. He is a past master of the East Gate Lodge, and one of its trustees.

From 1921 until 1928, he was a director of the Northeast Building Association.

Treasury Hunts For Corn Loan Within Budget

Presidential Parley Names Bell to Seek 'Ever Normal' Plan Funds.

Faced with an $893,245,000 budget deficit, Treasury officials searched the ledgers last night to find funds to finance a new corn loan program providing "partial application" of Secretary of Agriculture Wallace's ever-normal granary plan.

The search for corn loan money "within the budget" was turned over to Acting Budget Director Daniel Bell. Secretary of the Treasury Morgenthau disclosed yesterday.

Morgenthau and Wallace discussed the proposed corn loan with the President Wednesday, but reached no agreement.

"We decided that Mr. Bell would make a study of the situation, and, pending completion of the study, no decisions of any kind would be made," Morgenthau said yesterday. "The President said to take long enough to do an intelligent piece of work."

Farm Bill "No. 1 Business."

Morgenthau said only the corn loan was discussed with the President. Meantime, Congress has agreed to take up as No. 1 business at the November 15 session a new farm bill embracing ever-normal granary features.

Senate sub-committees in the West and the South are gathering data from farmers on which to base the measure, and Chairman Marvin Jones of the House Agriculture Committee is returning to Washington October 27 to hold hearings on a parallel bill. Wallace has indicated he favors processing taxes for partial financing of the program, and a possible combination of voluntary and compulsory surplus control.

Two members of the Senate subcommittee touring the South—Senators Bankhead, of Alabama, and Ellender, of Louisiana (Democrats)—said they believed 75 per cent of Southern farmers they have met favor compulsory crop control.

Alabamans Favor Control.

Associated Press interviewed Bankhead and Ellender in Montgomery, Ala., following sub-committee hearings in Kentucky, North Carolina, South Carolina and Georgia.

R. J. Goode, Alabama agricultural commissioner, told the submittee yesterday 15,000 Alabama cotton farmers in county meetings voted 96 per cent for compulsory control, 77 per cent for an acreage rather than a baleage base, and favored using diverted cotton acreage for other crops.

White House consideration of a corn loan to peg falling corn prices, followed a loan of 9 cents a pound on good grades of cotton, made shortly after Congress adjourned. Wallace said Wednesday that the corn loan, if approved, would be a partial application of his ever-normal granary program, which must receive Congressional approval if fully effective.

The American Farm Bureau Federation is seeking a corn loan of 60 cents a bushel, compared to the 45-cent corn loan in 1933. Officials said a 46-cent loan would compare with the 9-cent loan made on cotton.

Confronted with reduced revenue estimates and a higher deficit, Budget Bureau officials must draw at least part of the proposed cotton loan fund from the current budget, then provide in next year's budget for the unestimated cost of the (as yet unenacted) ever-normal granary program.

U. S. Accepts Bids On 22 Old Ships

By the Associated Press.

The Maritime Commission announced yesterday acceptance of bids totaling $991,111.93 for the purchase of 22 of the 25 obsolete vessels in the commission's laid up fleet on which bids were received Wednesday.

Four ships were bid in by Boyd, Weir and Sewell, of New York, for a Greek customer who will place them in operation with the pledge that they will not compete with American shipping.

Simpson, Spence and Young, of New York City, bid $381,700 for ten ships to be scrapped either in this country or abroad.

Union Shipbuilding Co., of Baltimore, bid $106,275 for four ships to be scrapped in American yards.

Hyman Michaels Co., of Chicago, offered $85,900 for two ships to be scrapped anywhere and $48,700 for two ships to be scrapped in American yards.

G. E. Marden, of New York City, was high bidder on three ships for foreign operation but the commission deferred action on his offer.

Monument Planned.

Parsons, W. Va., Oct. 21.—Plans were complete today for the erection of a monument here to commemorate the battle of Corricks Ford and the death of Gen. Robert S. Garnett, Confederate leader, who fell in the local battle fought July 13, 1861. He was the first officer killed in the Civil War.

Dr. Wolfson to Speak.

Taking as his topic, "Spinoza, Philosopher and Jew," Dr. A. Wolfson, of New York, will occupy the pulpit of Adas Israel Hebrew Congregation tomorrow. Services will be conducted by Rabbi S. H. Metz.

Return of Congress Will Cost $1,000,000

By the Associated Press.

It's going to cost the taxapayers about $1,000,000 to bring members of Congress back to Washington and pay them and their office workers during the special session.

On top of that will be expenses which cannot be estimated readily in advance, such as the cost of printing the Congressional Record. These additional items might bring the total cost to more than $1,500,000.

Young People's Rally.

"Crucifying Christ in Our Colleges" will be the subject of a lecture by Miss Amy L. Stockton, of California at 7:45 o'clock this evening at a young people's rally in Metropolitan Baptist Church, Sixth and A streets northeast.

Death Jury Told McAfee Drank 2 Quarts Daily

Defense Attorney's Illness Halts Trial in Killing of Mother of 3.

William (Major) McAfee, colored janitor charged with the slaying of Mrs. Henrietta Anderson, mother of three small children, voluntarily made a statement concerning the events surrounding the slaying, two detective sergeants testified in District Court yesterday.

Mrs. Anderson, who was beaten to death with a heavy cast-iron furnace shaker, was found in her L street apartment last summer, with her head crushed in. McAfee was arrested shortly afterward.

Acting upon the protest of Defense Attorney Robert I. Miller, Justice Jesse C. Adkins excused the jury while the admissibility of the statement made by McAfee was studied. Miller said McAfee had not been given the proper rest by the detectives who finally elicited from him facts concerning the finding of the body.

Detective Sergeants Jack Dalglish and Joseph Shimon, placed on the stand by Prosecuting Attorneys Charles B. Murray and Samuel F. Beach, testified they found McAfee so drunk when he was first spoken to that they permitted him to sleep several hours before beginning their questioning. They said he readily admitted the facts written in the statement.

A sudden illness incapacitated Miller and brought an abrupt halt to the trial before Justice Adkins had finally ruled on the propriety of the statement. Because of the illness, he adjourned further sessions until Monday.

McAfee, diminutive 61-year-old janitor of the building where Mrs. Anderson lived, was a heavy drinker, according to detectives. He was quoted as telling friends he often consumed as many as eight half-pint bottles of liquor daily without feeling the effects. A half-empty bottle was found in Mrs. Anderson's apartment, and an empty one was found in the janitor's quarters when police invaded them in search of clews.

1,000 Beekeepers, Many Bees Due At Conclave Here

Thousands of bees, some with foreign buzzes from 50-odd lands, will be heard about the Washington Hotel Monday when the International Beekeepers' Congress opens its three-day convention there. Gallons of the finest honey in the world will be on exhibition, including jellied ling heather honey from Scotland, white honey from Oregon and Huajillo honey made from the catclaw flowers in Vice President Garner's Uvalde, Tex. R. E Lothrop, honey specialist of the Department of Agriculture, is assembling the exhibit.

Tuesday there will be a big demonstration at the Zero milestone, when a crack swarm of specially trained bees will perform stunts for a group of eight boys and girls from the WPA beekeeping project at Morristown, Pa. Other demonstrators will show how effectively bees can be worn as clothing or even for toupes and beards. E. R. Scott will introduce the demonstrators and speakers.

More than 1,000 beekeepers are expected to attend the convention, sponsored by the American Honey Institute and the American Honey Producers League.

$10 Ransom Bill Gives New Clew in Ross Kidnaping

Chicago, Oct. 21 (AP).—The finding of a ransom bill gave Federal agents a fresh clew to the kidnapers of Charles S. Ross today.

The $10 bill—one of the 5,250 notes which made up the $50,000 ransom paid in a vain attempt to gain the release of the retired manufacturer—was discovered by Mrs. Clara Ludwig, 41, Rock Island Railroad clerk.

She said she obtained the bill from an insurance collector. Agents located the collector and took him with them as they left for an undisclosed destination.

Dime Store Asks $14-$15 Pay Scale

Apparently deadlocked on the question of what wage it will recommend for 8,000 women retail clerks in Washington, the District Minimum Wage Board Conference will reopen its inquiry Monday night.

The employers' group, which recommended a wage of $14.75, yesterday made public a report by a marketing expert of the F. W. Woolworth Co. The author, Dr. Paul Nystrom, of Columbia University, will testify as a witness Monday night for Jacob Hemminger, manager of the Woolworth store on F street.

Dr. Nystrom recommended that the scale be graded from $14 to $15. The schedule should be $14 for clerks working 40 hours a week, he said, $14.50 for those working 44 hours and $15 for those working 48 hours. The scale should be $1 less for minors, he said, and $1 less for workers with less than a year's experience.

Employe spokesmen have asked for a minimum wage of $21.51 per week.

Troops Quit Oil Region As C. I. O. Bosses Agree

Ardmore, Okla., Oct. 21 (AP).—Southern Oklahoma's oil strike zone was partly demilitarized tonight when Jones Oil Co. officials and C. I. O. union representatives agreed to resumption of emergency operations at ten leases. Sheriff Floyd Randolph, acting under orders of Gov. E. W. Marland, sent deputies into the Healdton field to survey conditions and indicated at least 50 of the 80 National Guardsmen called out yesterday would be withdrawn. An agreement to settle the strike, called in protest against dismissal of a dozen union workmen, was reported near.

Public Smoking a Vicious Habit, Head Clubwoman Tells W. C. T. U.

Mrs. Lloyd W. Biddle Also Condemns Drinking and Declares Making Up Face in Public 'Awful' Example to Daughters.

The flask on the hip and the red light of the cigarette are two of the most dangerous products of our age, Mrs. Lloyd W. Biddle, president of the Federation of Women's Clubs, told members of the W. C. T. U. of the District of Columbia yesterday at their sixty-third annual convention, which will be concluded today at the First Congregational Church, Tenth and G streets.

"Smoking in public is one of the most vicious habits women have today," Mrs. Biddle continued, "and makeup in public is awful, especially for the example of our daughters."

Observing that "men sit while women stand in street cars," Mrs. Biddle declared that "women should hold the banner of womanhood so high that they would be put back on the pedestal they occupied before the war. The race rises no higher than its women."

A report of the nominating committee, headed by Mrs. Len Stabler, proposed the following for election today: President, Mrs. Ida W. Ramsey; first vice president, Mrs. Earle Willey; second vice president, Mrs. Jennie E. Wright; corresponding secretary, Mrs. Florence W. Warner; recording secretary, Mrs. Manuel Kline; assistant recording secretary, Mrs. Lillie Lawrence, and treasurer, Mrs. Daniel Crain.

Among several brief reports, Mrs. Arthur C. Watkins spoke on "International Relations for Peace," Mrs. A. L. Talbot, on "Child Welfare," and Mrs. George McLaughlin on the "Department of Soldiers and Sailors." Mrs. Harry W. Burgan led devotional service.

A musical program included selections by Mrs. Winifred Keith Pinto, soprano, and Mrs. Leo Tooley, contralto. Mrs. R. F. Atkinson, organist for the Dumbarton M. E. Church, led a song service.

Farley Assails Roosevelt Foes' 'Fear Crusade'

Claims Enemies Try to 'Scare' Country to Regain Power.

By the Associated Press.

Los Angeles, Oct. 21.—James A. Farley, chairman of the Democratic National Committee, charged tonight that enemies of the Roosevelt Administration are conducting a campaign of fear in an effort to "scare the country" into returning them to power.

"Sometimes," he told an audience of California Democrats, "the strategists of panic speak in the sepulchral tones of your own fellow citizen, former President Hoover, who knows what happened, but apparently does not know why it happened.

"Sometimes their mouthpiece is a disgruntled Democrat out of step with his party and fancying that it is the party that is out of step with him.

Market Drops Hailed.

"More frequently it is the newspapers which sought to put the Governor of Kansas in Roosevelt's place."

Speaking only a few days after the stock market had experienced its sharpest break in more than four years, Farley denounced political opponents who, he said, "hail every drop in the market as additional evidence that the country is going to the dogs."

"With a whole Nation voicing its satisfaction of the manner in which the Democratic Administration is doing its job," he declared, "this jealous, envious, greedy group is trying to make our people believe that the captain who has brought our ship through peril after peril is bent on casting that ship on the rocks."

Cites Postal Measure.

"Unable to deny the presence of prosperity," he said, "they say it will not last. In the face of restoration that is the wonder of the world, they proclaim that our Democratic administration is ruining the country."

As Postmaster General, he reported an increase in postal revenues and interpreted it as meaning better business all around. The people of California spent $8,500,000 more for postage stamps in the fiscal year 1937 than in 1933, he said.

D. C. Jail Reports Record Populace

The District Jail last month had the highest daily average population in its history, Thomas M. Rives, superintendent, reported yesterday. The figure was 754. The nearest approach to that record was 721 in September, 1936.

Army Buys 55 Planes From California Firm

The Army yesterday awarded a contract, valued at approximately $1,731,407, for 55 single-motored observation planes and spare parts, to North American Aviation, Inc., of Inglewood, Calif. Engines and their equipment will be furnished by the Government.

Forty-eight of these planes will be used by National Guard organizations and the others by the Regular Army, War Department officials said.

Crash of Market Predicted to the Day 3 Years Ago

St. Louis, Oct. 21 (AP).—Jerome J. Schotten predicted to the day the severe stock market setback of last Monday on his Christmas cards three years ago.

As a navigator setting a three-year course for his friends, Schotten, president of a coffee company, forecast "ideal fair weather" for business for 1935 and 1936, "such as would not be experienced again until 1943."

As for 1937, he said: "Variable weather and seas to August. Find yourself a good harbor until 1940. Storms commencing in September. Hurricane on stock exchange October 18 to October 24. Caution."

2 Injured, 200 Shaken As Train Leaves Rails

Blackwell, Mo., Oct. 21 (AP).—The railroad agent and a mail clerk were seriously injured and about 200 passengers were shaken up when three cars of the Missouri Pacific's Texan were derailed here today.

Ex-Associates Call Denhardt 'Power-Drunk'

Threat to Garrs' Lives Is Quoted as Roy Pleads Insanity in Shooting.

By the Associated Press.

Shelbyville, Ky., Oct. 21.—Former fellow officers in the Kentucky National Guard termed Brig. Gen. Henry H. Denhardt "domineering" and "power drunk" during the murder trial of Roy and Jack Garr late today, charged with murder of the former Kentucky adjutant general.

Shortly afterward the defense sprang a surprise by offering testimony that Roy was temporarily insane when he shot Denhardt on the street here the night of September 20. Roy had told the jury Denhardt had threatened his life and added "I shot to protect my life." Jack denied he was armed when the Garr brothers met Denhardt.

Backing up defense claims that Roy feared the portly World War veteran, Mrs. Verdie Bennett, housekeeper for comely Verna Garr Taylor to whom Denhardt was engaged, testified Denhardt told Mrs. Taylor he would shoot her brothers, "especially that big bum, Roy, like a rat" if they continued to oppose his marriage to her.

Mrs. Gus Brawner testified she heard Denhardt declare "if it hadn't been for the Garr boys Mrs. Taylor and I would have been happily married by now." Denhardt was killed on the eve of his second trial on a charge of murdering Mrs. Taylor.

Brig. Gen. Ellerbe W. Carter, of Louisville, who was associated with Denhardt when the latter was Kentucky adjutant general, termed him "one of the most violent, domineering and unscrupulous men I ever knew."

Lew Ulrich, Louisville, a National Guard first lieutenant and former aide-de-campe to Denhardt, characterized him as "power-drunk" and "officious." Maj. Joseph Kelley, Frankfort, described him as "cruel and inhuman."

Four Youths Held In Series of D. C. Taxi Robberies

Four youths were held by police last night in connection with robberies of numerous taxicabs within the last several months.

Three of the prisoners were charged with robbery and the unauthorized use of automobiles.

They registered as David C. Cornwell, 25, of 3600 M street northwest; Robert J. Evans, 20, of the 3000 block of M street northwest and Harold K. White, 18, of the 3300 block of F street northwest.

The fourth youth was held for investigation in a Seventh Precinct station cell.

Detective Sergt. E. E. Thompson said the robberies for which the quartet was arrested were committed by a gang of four bandits.

Her Son Threatened

MRS. LOUIS W. CAPPELLI, wife of Rhode Island's secretary of state, was in a hospital when the Cappelli nurse told of an attempt by two men to kidnap John Cappelli, age 1½ years. Police started a widespread search.

Southern Coach Fares Due to Rise

By the Associated Press.

Southern railroads, it was said authoritatively yesterday in rail circles, have decided to raise coach fares from 1½ to 2 cents a mile, effective November 1. The action was taken at a meeting of Southern railway traffic executives held here. The territory embraced is that region south of the Ohio and Potomac rivers and east of the Mississippi.

Interstate Commerce Commission approval is practically assured, rail executives said, inasmuch as it already allows a 2-cent maximum coach fare.

Recently, first class or Pullman fares were increased by Southern and Western roads from 2 to 2¼ cents a mile.

Tower Scaffold Shifts; 3 Killed, 5 Injured

Duluth, Minn., Oct. 21 (AP).—Three men were killed and five others injured today when a scaffold shifted on a tower under construction at the College of St. Scholastica, plunging the men into freshly poured concrete.

Fire broke out immediately from salamanders used to heat the concrete, hindering the rescue work. The men were laying a concrete floor in the tower of the new chapel, 60 feet above the ground.

Lunch Assured D. C. Students For 2 Months

$20,000 Raised in Drive; Fund for Rest of Term Sought.

Money is "in the bank" to provide free lunches for the District's needy school children for two months, and members of the citizens emergency committee are enthusiastic in their belief that the other six months of the term can be included in the food program.

The $20,000 on hand came half from the benefit boxing match Monday night and half from smaller contributions which are pouring in daily.

The next city-wide event is the charity ball at the Mayflower Tuesday night, for which many tickets are being sold. Mrs. John Boyle, jr., chairman of the lunch committee, declared last night that the ball will be "a major social event of the winter," as well as a major contribution to the lunch campaign.

Food concessions at the Inter-American Horse Show yesterday did a flourishing business, with saleslgirls doubling up their duties by selling tickets to the ball at the same time they sold hot dogs and popcorn. E. E. Harrington is in charge of the food sales. Mrs. Charles Hancock Reed is in charge of getting salespersons for the grandstands, and Mrs. Ross Garrett is in charge of operations at the booths.

Mrs. Boyle announced that the Grant Food Shopping Center, of which H. Varshah is general manager, has given 2,000 quarts of milk to the drive. More milk is needed, she said, but it is hoped it can be secured from milk consumers as a result of the drive now in progress.

One of the main contributions to the fund today will come from the travelogue being shown at 7 and 9 p. m. and 3:45 p. m. at Central High School under sponsorship of the District Congress of Parents and Teachers. Tommy Larkin is the photographer and lecturer. The movie will be in color.

The Belasco Theater has been leased for the first week in November for a series of magic shows. Mrs. Boyle said that she believes they will be demanded to give a "return engagement."

Dr. George C. Ruhland, health officer of the District, speaking over Station WOL at noon yesterday, said no special argument is needed "to get unanimous agreement on the necessity for having the child properly nourished."

"The matter of lunches for school children obviously is close to our interests and sympathy, not only because proper nourishment of the children at school is inseparable from the official obligation which the department of health has in the matter of school medical inspection, but also because I share with you the natural feeling for child life protection."

Maternity Welfare Conclave Studied

Plans for a maternity welfare conference in the winter were discussed yesterday at an informal meeting of representatives from medical, professional, and lay organizations called by the children's bureau of the Department of Labor.

The conferees were told that every 42 minutes a mother dies of conditions associated with pregnancy. A baby is born every 15 minutes, but in 1935, the delegates were told, 52,262 lived no longer than a month because of injuries at birth or of causes arising during pregnancy.

Man Asks Driver To Turn on Lights, And Leaps to Death

In the glare of a spotlight provided by an obliging motorist, an unidentified man last night committed suicide by leaping from an Alexandria wharf into the Potomac River.

Floyd Johnson and James Blundbaker, of 217 Patrick street, were seated in a parked automobile on the Cameron street wharf at 7:45 p. m. when a stranger approached.

"Will you please turn on your headlights," the man asked.

Thinking the man had lost something, one of the occupants switched on the lights. The next moment they saw the man walk down the path of light, reach the edge of the wharf and jump. They ran forward and peered into the water, but he was gone. They then notified Alexandria police, who began dragging the river.

The body was recovered by Stephen Davis, of 120 South Royal street, who helped police to grapple for it. The drowned man was about 25, dressed in a blue pin-stripe suit, black shoes and socks. There were no marks of identification, but a hat found on the wharf bore a label marked "Philadelphia—Park Felt."

A few minutes before the man went over the edge of the wharf he talked to Monk Langley, of the 300 block of King street. He told Langley he was going to commit suicide and offered him his clothes. Langley declined the offer. The body is at the District morgue.

Car Tires Deflated Before Homes on Morningside Drive

"Deflation" struck last night on Morningside drive—and was met with all the elasticity and speed of the American Automobile Association.

Unidentified persons, it seems, let all the air out of the tires of the automobiles of Charles E. Ford, the well-known attorney; George E. Gruber, Washington representative of the Eastman Kodak Co., and George E. Walker, head of the Walker Lumber Co. Agents of the A. A. A. fixed them.

The victims all live in the 7500 block of Morningside drive. Ford lives at 7524; Gruber at 7515, and Walker at 7521.

GOVERNMENT WORKERS! Arise! Don't go to your room or apartment and sit around all night wondering why you ever left home. Come to the Mayfair, 13th and F, where you may do your brooding among others . . . and incidentally, have a swell time in the bargain.

CONTRACT BRIDGE

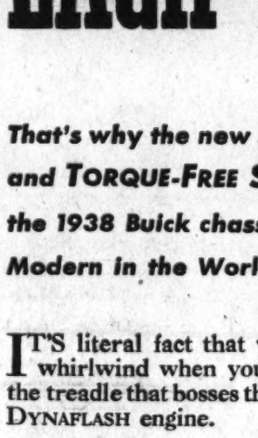
By Mrs. Ely Culbertson

Temper Your Optimism.

It is a good thing for a Bridge player to have an accurate idea of his own skill in the play of the cards. If he is sure that he can realize every trick that is in the hand he can afford to be optimistic on close bidding questions. If, on the other hand, he is in the habit of dropping a trick now and then he should restrain his enthusiasm on borderline hands. Today's hand is typical of the fate that befalls a player whose optimism exceeds his skill.

South, dealer.

Neither side vulnerable.



The bidding:

South	West	North	East
2 ♡	Pass	2 N T	Pass
6 ♡	Pass	Pass	Pass

South's jump to six hearts would not have been bad had he been a very fine player. There was little hope of finding out from partner whether or not he held any one of the dozen or so combinations of small cards that would produce the slam. Thus, North might have the Queen of spades or three clubs to the Queen and the nine of trumps for entry, or some holding which would make the slam possible with a favorable opening lead. Had a good player jumped to the slam he would have justified his optimism by making his contract. But the actual South player succeeded only in going down ingloriously.

West opened the Queen of clubs, hoping to establish a club trick before his Ace was knocked out. South won and cashed the Ace of trumps. When the trumps failed to break he feared that he would never get into dummy for a discard on the Queen of diamonds; therefore, very unwisely, he staked everything on a rather hopeless pseudo-squeeze. He proceeded to lead out all of his trumps and the rest of his high cards hoping his opponents would not know what to save.

Unfortunately for him, however, neither defender had a particularly difficult problem. As soon as South had led his last trump, West could and save a good club; and East had nothing but the Queen of spades to save in any case. South gave up the last two tricks, commenting mournfully on his wretched luck. An expert would have saved his mourning for a hand on which it was more appropriate.

After winning the first club trick and finding out about the bad trump break, correct play was to cash the other high club and lead the King of diamonds. If West had the Ace (as was actually the case) he would be unable to make any lead which could stop the slam; a spade lead would give South a free finesse; a diamond, a discard on the Queen; and a club, a ruff and a discard. Even if East had the Ace of diamonds he would probably have to give South the slam. A heart lead would assure North an entry for the cashing of the Queen of diamonds; a diamond lead would permit an immediate discard; a club would give South a ruff and discard, as before; and a spade lead would at least give South a chance to finesse.

EACH SPARK SETS OFF A TINY CYCLONE!

That's why the new DYNAFLASH ENGINE, and TORQUE-FREE SPRINGING, make the 1938 Buick chassis the Most Modern in the World

IT'S literal fact that you ride the whirlwind when your foot is on the treadle that bosses the new Buick DYNAFLASH engine.

Every five inches this thrilling car travels, a fist-size hurricane lets go in a cylinder head, lending tornadic force to the downward power-push of the piston.

You feel the swell and lift of it, the dynamic eager flow of it to the quickening wheels, but you feel it tamed to the firm cool smoothness of polished marble through silk.

Every action of this magnificent traveler is a miracle of poise and quiet and security, and every drop of gasoline you burn gives up gloriously more of its hidden power.

Slip into the driver's seat, sample for yourself the inspired engineering that sets the 1938 Buick head and shoulders above any other automobile you will meet this year.

Apart from the flashing beauty of the car, its luxurious room, its sumptuous fittings, measure the astounding performance of it, and the ride that matches its astonishing stride.

That level, floating, jarless going, that sense of almost flying, is given you by Buick's new TORQUE-FREE SPRINGING, which, adding new safety to new comfort, also lengthens rear tire life and blessedly reduces skids.

Not one but both of the standout engineering features of 1938 are yours in the new Buick—which tells you how to make your every new-car dollar do its full duty this next year!

A SAFETY CUSHION ON EACH WHEEL!
Buick replaces the usual leaf spring with this special spring (A) of stout coiled steel and big direct-acting Transport Type shock absorber (B). Rigidly aligned by Torque Tube (C), rear axle and wheels cannot twist or distort, cannot affect steering, greatly reducing danger from skids. No shackles, no grease points, no chatter, no premature rear tire wear from wheel-slip.

Labor Imperils Pay-Hour Bill, O'Connor Says

Criticism From Rival Factions Hurts Its Chances, He Declares.

By the Associated Press.

Chairman O'Connor of the House Rules Committee charged yesterday that both the A. F. of L. and the C. I. O. are "hurting the chances" of wage-hour legislation at the coming session of Congress by statements criticizing the pending bill.

Engaged, himself, in an effort to extricate the measure from his committee, in which it was pigeonholed last summer by a combination of Republicans and Southern Democrats, the New Yorker added he had been "embarrassed" by the attitudes of the two labor organization.

"You don't give a man something he doesn't want," he said.

Expects Early Report.

Nevertheless, O'Connor expressed confidence that early in the special session called for November 15, the committee would reverse itself and report the measure for action by the House as a whole. Getting that done, he said, was a "matter of simple mathematics."

It was plain he expected at least two members of the Republican-Southern Democratic coalition which blocked the bill at the last session to switch to the other side of the argument. At least two must do so if the bill is to be reported out.

O'Connor was of the opinion yesterday that this would be done.

The committee chirman said the C. I. O., and A. F. of L. statements to which he referred had been made since President Roosevelt called the special session of Congress and delivered his last fireside chat on Tuesday of last week.

Called "Poor Halting."

In addressing the C. I. O. conference in Atlantic City on Friday, John L. Lewis, head of the organization, referred to the bill as "that poor, halting wages and hours bill that finally emerged from the committee."

In convention in Denver on Wednesday, the A. F. of L. approved a committee report criticizing aspects of the measure on the ground, among others, that it constituted an intrusion upon the right of workers to improve their economic condition by collective bargaining through labor unions.

"If such a law were to be enacted it would establish the principle in American government that the fixing of wages was a natural and proper function of politicians and lawmakers," the report said.

Ickes Terms Landon 'Omega' of G. O. P.

By the Associated Press.

Alfred M. Landon, in the opinion of Secretary Ickes, is the "Omega" of the Republican Party—not the "Alpha."

(Alpha is the first letter in the Greek alphabet, Omega the last.)

The Secretary of Interior delivered this observation at a press conference yesterday in which he said he learned several things from the recent radio address of the former Republican nominee for President.

He said he learned that "Omega can't make as good a speech as Alpha made," and that Ghost Landon and Ghost Hoover seem to be competing for the same grave."

Storekeepers Warned Against Slot Machines

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Hagerstown, Oct. 21.—Magistrate Walter Sleasman, Smithsburg, served notice upon storekeepers permitting illegal slot machines to be operated that heavy fines can be expected when he imposed $100 fines upon drug store proprietor and tavern operator last night. The magistrate said that future offenders will face even stiffer fines.

Sheriff Max Malott has given illegal slot-machine owners until Saturday to remove them. Hagerstown police conducted a drive here last week, when Capt. of Police Carl H. McCleary ordered racehorse machines removed.

V. F. W. Entries to Close.

Comely candidates for the honor of reigning over the nineteenth annual Armistice Day ball, sponsored by the Veterans of Foreign Wars, at the Willard on November 11, have until noon tomorrow to enter their application for the "Queenship." Each of the 20 District posts in the veterans' organization will sponsor an entrant.

Tom McCarthy

The Postilion
Talks to the 'Pitchmen.'

TOM McCARTHY.

"SON, HE SAID, "they're the meanest people in the world!" His hand swept accusingly toward the pedestrians scurrying down Thirteenth street. "They're the meanest people in the world," he said—"until they eat. After that they're grand. You can talk to them, then."

He was delivering himself of a bit of pitchman philosophy. Thirteenth street between G street and H seems to be the main harbor for the pitchman—the sidewalk salesman. On that strip of street you can usually find purveyors of anything from Mexican jumping beans to gadgets which will make your old car so powerful you're almost afraid to take it out on the highway.

Only two pitchmen are working the street this week. One of them is the man from Connecticut, who wouldn't give me his name when he found out that I was a reporter. The other is Mr. J. B. Birdsong, of Georgia, recently returned from Maine, and about to depart for either Florida or California.

Possibly one shouldn't place undue significance on Mr. Birdsong's name. But when the cold weather arrives he heads for the warmer climes. It doesn't make much difference whether he goes to Florida or California, because as he proudly tells you, the Nation is his sales territory.

"A lot of people don't understand us pitchmen," Mr. Birdsong told me. "We're salesmen, and we're just as careful of our reputation as the salesmen for any big company you could mention.

"For 25 years I was a salesman for Aeolian pianos. Now I sell this gadget which will renew your sparkplugs, give more power to your motor and save on gasoline. I sell it for a dollar. I guarantee to refund the money if they don't like it. I do refund the money, and I'm just as careful to keep satisfied customers as any salesman you ever knew.

While we were talking a representative of one of the local automobile clubs darted from the sidewalk just long enough to tell Mr. Birdsong how good the gadget was. "Best thing I ever used on my car," the automobile club man said.

"It happens all the time," Mr. Birdsong said, proudly.

* * * *

TALKING WITH Mr. Birdsong and the man from Connecticut you can get a lot of information about pitchmen. And the man from Connecticut will tell you that there are "pitchmen and pitchmen."

"It's just like any other game," he told me. "You've got guys in the racket who just want to make enough for a quarter flop and the price of a drink. Then you've got the businessman. The real pitchman is a businessman.

The man from Connecticut didn't say outright that he was a businessman, but when he leaned back against the fender of his new convertible coupe, he didn't leave much doubt in my mind. He had a new car. Inside was a well-cared-for bull terrier.

* * * *

ON THE EDGE of the parking lot, next to his car, was his stock in trade. He offered glass cutters for a quarter. And he sold them!

"Pitchmen," he mused aloud, "I know all of them. I've been one for 15 years. Sometimes I go along for 10 years without seeing some of my friends in the trade, and then I run into them at a county fair or on a street corner in Boston. Then we have a real reunion!

"Myself, I mostly work New England. I like it there. Even in the winter. Of course I could go south, but I'd rather hang out in the industrial towns. I can make a living working just one hour a day—the lunch hour." His hand rested on the fender of his new car.

"How did I get to be a pitchman? Well, it's a funny story. I was a "ham" actor. Played through the South. Came from New Orleans in the first place even if I do like to live in New England.

"But, as I was saying, I was a ham actor. We were playing the "Trail of the Lonesome Pine," and during the intermission I used to sell the audience those "Lucky Stones," from Patrick County, Va. Some old farmer we met down there used to sell us a keg of the stones for about $1. We resold them to the audience for about 25 cents each. As actors we weren't much good. But the sale of the "Lucky Stones"—you know they're shaped like a cross—helped to keep us in meals.

"Funny thing when you think of it. The whole cast used to sit around between shows polishing "Lucky Stones." As actors we were good stone polishers. And I was a good salesman. That gave me the idea. I got hold of this glass cutter and I've been selling it ever since.

* * * *

"HOW DO I get my crowd? Watch!" The most ridiculous thing you ever saw!

I'm not going to tell how the man from Connecticut creates the illusion of piercing his forearm with a butcher knife. But I will say that it jammed the sidewalk in front of his space on the parking lot.

He didn't pay any attention to the crowd, but like a good actor withheld the drama until the interest was assured. Soon a dozen people had collected, and he picked up a cow bell and swung the metal against the handle of the knife. The crowd gasped.

"Now, men," he said, "I'm going to tell you how I do this trick. Simply take a handy butcher knife and put it through your arm. If anything goes wrong, bring the arm down here and I'll give you a new one. In the meantime make sure that the knife is sharp." With a quick movement of his hand and, under cover of a red bandana, the knife was removed and dropped behind the table.

"To make sure that the knife is sharp—use this." While the crowd hung on his words, and followed the movements of his hands almost hypnotically, he produced the glass cutter. It could be used, he claimed, not only to cut glass, but also to sharpen anything from a lawn mower to a razor blade. He sharpened knives, whittled paper with axes, and cut glass into circles and squares. The demonstration was effective. Five cutters were sold.

"That's the way it goes," he said. "I might make $10 in one hour or $3 all day. Some weeks in this racket you can make hundreds. Possibly you average around $35 or $40. But I never knew there was a depression.

Mr. Birdsong across the way agreed that business was good. He said that it was half again as good as it was last year.

"Pitchmen," they told me, "know conditions better than the professors. When money is loose, we get the change. This town? A good town. Everybody seems to have that extra quarter."

Realty Parley Spurs Drive on Sharp Practice

Legislation to Exclude the Incompetent and Dishonest Urged.

By Thomas M. Cahill.
Post Real Estate Editor.

Pittsburgh, Pa., Oct. 21.—Progress of a campaign to exclude the dishonest and incompetent from the real estate business through license legislation was reviewed at the second day's session of the convention of the National Association of Real Estate Boards, meeting at the William Penn Hotel.

Speaking at a symposium on "real estate license laws as a protection to the broker," J. Mortimer Clark, Long Beach, Calif., president of the National Association of Real License Law Officials and real estate commissioner of that State, said the association in the past year had been responsible for stopping sale of more than $60,000,000 of worthless properties.

Legislation Urged.

Reminding that requirements for real estate brokerage should rank with those of the highest of the professions, Roland R. Randall, Philadelphia, chairman of the advisory committee on administration of Pennsylvania's license law, urged legislation to supplement the work of real estate boards in maintaining standards of business conduct. In strengthening Pennsylvania's law, it was borne in mind, he said, that during the last boom period, a multitude of incapable persons entered the business, for the most part temporarily.

He advised State associations contemplating, or having enacted such legislation, against merely resting on the law. License law organizations must be improved as time passes, and publicity is an important and necessary adjunct to their successful operation, he said. The act is worthless unless its content be made known and workable, he warned.

D. C. Official Speaks.

The new real estate license law for the District of Columbia, enacted by Congress at its last session, was described by Charles J. Rush, secretary of Washington Real Estate Board. The law becomes effective November 23 and contains 16 grounds upon which disciplinary action may be taken.

While the word "realtor" is not used in the act, its unlawful use by any broker could result in his suspension, Rush explained. Another restrictive clause prohibits any broker or salesman from guaranteeing future profits which may result from resale of property.

Thirty States, the District of Columbia, the Territory of Hawaii and four Canadian provinces now have license laws.

Joseph W. Catharine, Brooklyn, N. Y., was nominated president for the next administrative year. Donald T. Pomeroy, Syracuse, N. Y., was named vice president for the Central Atlantic, or local region, and H. Clifford Bangs, Washington, D. C., and J. C. Nichols, Kansas City, Mo., were among those named to the directorate for three-year terms. Their nomination is tantamount to election tomorrow.

Charles J. Rush, Washington, D. C., was elected chairman of the executive committee of the realtor secretaries council. Nichols is well known in Washington, being a member of the National Capital Park and Planning Commission.

Mrs. Byrd Improved.

Winchester, Va., Oct. 21 (AP).—Mrs. Richard E. Byrd, sr., who suffered a broken collarbone recently in a fall at her home here, was reported steadily improving today. She is the mother of Senator Harry F. Byrd and Admiral Richard Evelyn Byrd.

Maleo, New Zoo Bird, Leaves Young to Hatch Themselves

Strange Fowl, About Size of Bantam Rooster, Covers Eggs With Rotting Leaves to Generate Heat; Chicks Put on Own From Outset.

The casual visitor to the Zoo's birdhouse probably pays little or no attention to the new maleo, a strange bird that flies as soon as it leaves the shell, but the three specimens are special pets of a certain Washington woman.

She is Hilda van Stockum, of 2326 Chester street southeast, a Dutch-American painter, author and illustrator, who translated and did the drawings for the newly published children's book, "Tilio, a Boy of Papua." A chapter in the volume is devoted to the rarely seen maleo, which is about the size of a small bantam rooster.

The book, written in Dutch by Rudolph Voorhoeve, narrates the legendary tale of how the maleo invented an incubator which relieves the mother bird of the necessity of sitting on the eggs.

"Yep, it's true that the megapode (as zoologists call this type of bird) never sees its mother, hatches in mounds of decaying vegetation and has to shift for itself from birth," Dr. William M. Mann, Zoo director, said yesterday.

"The maleo is like Topsy—it just growed. After covering her eggs with a mound of rotting leaves, which generate enough warmth to hatch them, mama bird goes on her way. The chicks are on their own from the very beginning."

Although it is not unusual for the East Indian fowl to lay eggs in captivity, don't expect any fledglings before next summer because the three specimens that arrived here with the other new animals several weeks ago are not provided with the necessary leaves.

When spring comes, however, they will be transferred to outdoor cages, given plenty of what it takes to build a hatching mound and told to get busy.

And then it may develop that none of the trio is of the egg-laying sex.

"We'll just have to wait and see," said Dr. Mann.

McCarran Urges One Body Rule Air

The crash Sunday night of a transcontinental airliner in which 19 persons lost their lives "emphasizes the necessity of legislation placing civil aviation under one responsible control" Senator Pat McCarran, of Nevada, said Wednesday.

Pointing out that bills introduced at the last session of Congress would have given the Interstate Commerce Commission jurisdiction over the civil airways of the United States, he declared the provisions of the projected laws would have so affected air commerce regulation and safety by the experienced authority of the I. C. C. as to make such disasters improbable.

Fall of Gijon Speeds Race to Localize War

French Fear Quick Franco Victory; Eden Accepts Investigation Plan.

By the Associated Press.

London, Oct. 21.—The fall of Gijon to Spanish insurgents tonight thrust Europe's nonintervention machinery into a race to withdraw foreign "volunteers" from Spain before Insurgent Generalissimo Francisco Franco's legions threaten a complete conquest.

British foreign office experts labored to perfect details of the withdrawal scheme based on yesterday's Italo-German compromise in time for tomorrow's meeting of the Nine-Power Nonintervention Subcommittee.

It is proposed that a commission go to Spain to determine the manner of removing volunters from the Spanish civil war—in which Italy has semi-officially admitted at least 40,000 blackshirt troops are fighting with Franco.

Eden Thanks Italy.

That Europe's tension over the Spanish crisis had slackened was indicated by Foreign Secretary Anthony Eden, who, addressing the fall opening of the House of Commons, thanked Italy for her "eleventh hour" but "very welcome" contribution to Spanish nonintervention.

Eden, in the foreign affairs debate, however, reaffirmed Britain's determination to permit no challenge to her "right of way" through the Mediterranean—her sea link with her colonies.

Though Great Britain and France have avoided at least temporarily a showdown with the Rome-Berlin axis on Spain's civil war, the foreign secretary made it clear in Parliament that the British government firmly intends to see that conflicts become a purely Spanish matter.

Hitler Credited With Change.

He stated unequivocally that Britain wants no sides taken in Spain, but "there will be no indifference on the part of the British government where it is clear that vital British interests are concerned"—(such as keeping the Mediterranean open).

He declared that both Italy and Germany (reportedly at the instance of Chancellor Adolf Hitler) had "substantially modified their views" on the relation of evacuation of foreign auxiliaries to the granting of belligerents' rights to both sides. Italy had insisted formerly that Franco be recognized as a belligerent before the principle of "hands-off Spain" be established.

Eden told the House of Commons that the Italian plan for deciding the proportions of withdrawals of foreign volunteers from either army on the basis of figures submitted by a commission to be sent to Spain was "acceptable."

French Fear Quick Victory.

Informed French quarters, however, asserted that Franco, with Italian troops which he has been massing at Zaragoza for three weeks, might be able to clinch an Italian-engineered victory before the commission procedure of withdrawal could become effective.

France Tells Nazis She'll Aid Czechs As New RiftLooms

Paris, Oct. 21 (U.P.).—France unofficially warned Germany tonight that she is Czechoslovakia's ally and will aid her if she is attacked.

The warning, issued by an unofficial spokesman for the foreign office, was the latest outgrowth of the mounting tension between Czechoslovakia and Germany over the arrest of several Nazi politicians in Czechoslovakia several days ago.

French Workers Refuse To Unload Nippon Ship

Paris, Oct. 21 (U.P.).—The French Labor Federation's boycott of Japanese goods as a protest against "Japanese aggression in China" was made effective today when the Marseilles dockworkers syndicate announced it would not permit unloading of the Japanese liner Kashima Maru. The Kashima Maru is due in Marseilles tomorrow from London. Simultaneously the administrative committee of the federation announced a decision to enforce the boycott throughout France.

A Chinese Symbol Falls

This metal statue of Sun-Yat-Sen of China, the "father of the revolution," was blown from its base by Japanese shells. When Nippon's infantrymen occupied the spot, the figure of the Chinese leader became a symbol of victory for Japanese arms.

the "second phase" of the Shanghai fighting.

Before the second phase could get under way, the Chinese, matching their overwhelming numbers against Japan's highly modernized war machine, exploded a counter-offensive into the face of the Japanese in the Chapei-Hongkew area.

Fighting broke out along Szechuan road, where Japanese batteries in Kongkew Park, to the east, and Chinese batteries near Markham road, to the west, began to pound each other.

The Japanese, in the meantime, had begun the key operations in their new offensive northwest of the city, smashing at the Chinese rear lines at Tazang, which has been under constant attack for three days. The reinforced assault was with tanks, machine guns and mobile artillery.

The Japanese were attempting a "strangling encirclement" of the Chinese forces in Chapei.

The Chinese military spokesman announced that large detachments of troops of Gen Shih Yueh, commander of the Old Ironsides army and chief of the Shanghai defense forces, had counter-attacked north of Tazang, striking the Japanese from the rear.

If this counter-offensive proves effective, it will catch the Japanese in a dangerous position, military observers said, since the area in front of the Japanese advance toward Tazang is a treacherous strip of almost impenetrable barbed-wire defenses the Chinese have thrown up in the last few weeks.

Throughout the night Chinese planes roared over Yangtsepoo, in the heart of the Japanese area in the Settlement. They unloaded tons of explosives.

England Sends India Iron Man To Quell Arabs

Fresh Violence Reported as Britain Insists on Partition.

By the Associated Press

London, Oct. 21.—Renewed terroristic violences was reported from Palestine today, while the secretary of state for colonial affairs, William G Tormsby-Gore, told Commons that Britain intended to go ahead with the plan for a three-way partition of the Holy Land.

Dispatches from Jerusalem told of new attacks at the Lydda airport, where severe punitive measures had been taken by the government following the burning of sheds a few nights ago. The Iraq oil pipe line was again punctured by shots near Beisan.

Police were hunting the assailants of Avinoam Yellin, Cambridge-educated senior inspector of Jewish schools in the department of education, who was shot and critically wounded today as he was entering his Mount Zion office beside the old city wall.

Jewish Bus Ambushed.

On the Jaffa-Jerusalem road near Motza daylight ambushers attacked a Jewish bus with a fusillade of shots. Four Jews were injured by flying glass.

Ormsby-Gore disclosed the government was sending Sir Charles Teggart, former high officer of the Indian police, to Palestine to advise the government on the strengthened police administration. Teggart put down terrorism in Bengal and survived several attacks on his life while police commissioner of Calcutta. His present mission was described as temporary.

The colonial secretary said effective action had been taken to deal with the violence growing out of Jewish and Arab animosities. The government now felt free, he said, to undertake the investigation required before the division of the Holy Land into sovereign Arab and Jewish states and a British mandate.

Jews Protest New Law.

Accordingly, he said, it was proposed to apoint a special body to investigate conditions in the Holy Land and submit a detailed scheme of partition along the general lines of the royal commission report.

Jews, meanwhile, were aroused to a fresh storm of protest over a new draft ordinance restricting immigration of Jews and other foreigners to the Holy Land. The ordinance, carrying out one of the commission's proposals, empowered the high commissioner to grant a fixed number of immigration permits to March 31, 1938, instead of regulating immigration according to the country's capacity for economic absorption.

The Jewish press dubbed the new regulations "a travesty of the letter and spirit of the mandate," while Jewish leaders emphasized their strong view that the country's economic capacity was the only basis for admission of Jews to the "Jewish National Home."

An Arab leader declared "our demands remain unchanged, namely, an Arab sovereign state and the Arab majority giving constitutional rights to minorities."

Asturian Revolt Gives Up Gijon To Insurgents

Franco Expects to Send Men South for Death Blow to Government.

ern campaign be but a matter of a few days, releasing about 75,000 troops for an offensive elsewhere, but the days of the savage Asturian dynamiters in this war are now definitely ended.

Many Asturians surrendered in Gijon as they did in Santander—also captured after an internal rebellion—although some battalions flew to the hills for a last ditch resistance.

As soon as news of Gijon's fall reached the Asturians in the Oviedo sector, where more than a year of savage fighting has prevailed with first one and then the other side holding part of the Asturian capital, entire battalions surrendered.

Oviedo "Handed Over."

The radio reported the government line in that sector had broken down completely and all Oviedo and its suburbs had been handed over to the insurgents while other groups of Asturians fled to the hills, casting away their guns as they ran.

The Gijon radio reported 12 ships, some loaded with government leaders, had been captured by the insurgents. Belarmino Tomas, the anarchist Governor of Gijon, left by an earlier boat. (Insurgent dispatches to Irun said Tomas had been captured and imprisoned at Santander.)

During the morning the anarchists who had been ruling the city were overthrown by Asturians and Basques who were convinced further resistance was useless.

Quick Victory Envisioned.

With the additional troops released for offensives at Barcelona or Valencia, the insurgent command appeared hopeful of dealing a decisive blow to the government before any material number of foreign volunteers could be withdrawn under the London nonintervention committee's plan. It has been Franco's hope to end the 15-month-old civil war before winter makes operations difficult.

Hendaye, Franco-Spanish Frontier, Oct. 21 (U.P.).—The main force of 70,000 Asturian Marxists, all that remains of the loyalist armies in northwest Spain, rushed across the Cantabrian Mountains toward the sea tonight to escape wholesale slaughter.

Guard and Official Shot in Cuban Row

Havana, Oct. 21 (AP).—The newly elected president of the Havana provincial council and a council policeman were wounded gravely today in a shooting fray in the council chamber. Severiano Pulido, elected to the presidency after a political dispute with the governor of Havana Province, was signing his acceptance of the office when the gunfire rang out.

of troop movements on the other side of the border, and these reports soon became actualities.

The State Department last night sent to Honduras and Nicaragua the following message:

"The Government of the United States in association with the governments of Costa Rica and Venezuela is glad to tender its good offices to the governments of Honduras and Nicaragua with the hope that this friendly service may facilitate a pacific solution of the boundary controversy which has unfortunately arisen between the two republics.

"Should the republics of Nicaragua and Honduras be disposed to accept this offer of good offices, the three governments will be happy to offer suggestions for the alleviation of the present tension in the relations between the republics of Honduras and Nicaragua, and, once that result is accomplished, to make suggestions as to means, equally acceptable to both parties, which might be adopted by Honduras and Nicaragua with the object of reaching a definitive settlement of the controversy.

At the same time, United States diplomatic representatives in all other American republics were instructed to advise the governments to which they are accredited, as follows:

"The Declaration of Principles of Inter-American Solidarity and Cooperation unanimously adopted by the American republics at the conference for the maintenance of peace held in Buenos Aires declares that 'every act susceptible of disturbing the peace of America affects each and every one of them.' In accordance with the spirit of that declaration my government is taking this immediate opportunity of advising the government of (the country addressed) of the good offices which this Government jointly with the governments of Costa Rica and Venezuela is extending to the governments of Honduras and Nicaragua and of its hope that these friendly services may assist in facilitating a peaceful settlement of the dispute which has arisen between these two republics."

Kennedy Calls Algic Mutiny A Sea Scandal

Merchant Marine Labor Situation 'Definitely Bad,' He Says.

and said, 'here's that gal you wanted to meet.'"

Authority Lacking.

It was suggested to Kennedy that American sailors, having been nurtured on a spirit of equality, couldn't be expected to be servile like foreigners. His answer was that one could be "civil without being servile."

Asked what could be done to bring about discipline on American ships, Kennedy pointed out that the Maritime Commission had no authority where labor disputes were concerned.

"This Government," he said, "has 65 bureaus touching on maritime affairs."

"What do you think of the Algic case?" Kennedy was asked.

"I think it is scandalous," he replied.

The Maritime Commission, he said, had turned over all its evidence to the Bureau of Marine Inspection and Navigation which began a hearing in Baltimore yesterday.

Urges Officers' Union.

Asked what he thought of the Algic crew's demand that Capt. Gainard and the other officers join a maritime union, or else face a sit-down strike, Kennedy said:

"You can judge for yourself whether officers in the same union with the men would be conducive to discipline."

He explained that he thought officers ought to have the privilege of joining a union of their own.

The National Maritime Union, in its statement last night, said in part:

"When the captain of a vessel operated by the United States Government tells to the reporter of a Washington, D. C., newspaper a fanciful tale far from the reality and is simultaneously congratulated by an official of the Government for his courage and wisdom, it is high time for American citizens to realize what is taking place. Especially is this true when the tale conceived—together with the congratulations of the Government official'—is part of an effort to break a legitimate labor union engaged in wholly lawful pursuits.

Ring Criticized.

"The story told by Capt. Joseph Gainard of the S. S. Algic . . . can only be so interpreted by anyone who has attempted to investigate the facts. That Mr. Dan S. Ring, so-called labor representative of the United States Maritime Commission, should have congratulated Capt. Gainard on his handling of the situation concerning the Algic in the harbor at Montevideo before the facts had been fully investigated not only makes Mr. Ring a partisan, and therefore causes doubts about his fitness to hold public office, but also raises a serious question as to the conduct of the Maritime Commission itself, which permits one of its subordinates to prejudge publicly a case as Mr. Ring did."

(The Post was informed last night that Ring and members of the Maritime Commission had affidavits from officers and members of the crew for several days before Ring congratulated Capt. Gainard in Baltimore. These affidavits were obtained when the Algic stopped at Jacksonville Fla., en route to Baltimore.)

"It is true," continued the statement of the National Maritime Union, "that Mr. Ring had inspiration for his conduct in the notorious order issued by Chairman Joseph Kennedy, of the Maritime Commission, to throw the crew of the Algic in irons while in Montevideo harbor unless they went back to work. Chairman Kennedy, no more than Mr. Ring, had had no opportunity to receive an impartial estimate of the facts at Montevideo before he issued his order to throw American citizens in irons for exercising their constitutional rights. Nor did Chairman Kennedy have any authority under the law to issue such an order.

Story Declared Untrue.

"Only now that the S. S. Algic has docked and one of the marine casualty boards of the United States Bureau of Marine Inspection and Navigation is holding hearings on the case, are the true facts coming to light. Capt. Gainard spun a yarn in the Washington newspaper of the tumultuous voyage to Montevideo marked by extreme disorder and brawls. Nothing could be further from the truth. The crew, organized 100 per cent in the National Maritime Union, conducted itself in the disciplined and orderly fashion that has made the National Maritime Union the choice of the overwhelming proportion of the men who go down to the sea in ships.

"Much is made of the episode involving Able Seaman John Burgess, who was killed in a drunken brawl in a Jacksonville, Fla., waterfront saloon. The murder of Burgess, who, by the testimony of the crew, was a decidedly unstable person, was not committed by a member of the crew as skillfully implied in the Washington newspaper yarn spun from Capt. Gainard's talk, but was done by some unknown individual in Jacksonville with whom he had had altercations."

Accidents Charged.

Commenting on the charge of mutiny at Montevideo, the statement said:

"When the S. S. Algic cast anchor in Montevideo Harbor she was boarded by a gang of so-called 'free labor' stevedores of such incompetence that between 7 and 8 o'clock on the morning of September 10 a number of accidents both to the crew members of the Algic and to the experienced stevedores took place in the handling of the cargo. For the safety of the stevedores themselves it was apparent that the winches should be stopped. One stevedore was severely hurt when hit by a swinging piece of cargo. Only one stevedore was supplied to most of the winches, which are two-man winches, and extension handles had to be improvised in order to enable the single stevedores to attempt their operation.

"Moreover, power launches filled with striking Montevideo stevedores surrounded the Algic the minute she dropped anchor and the occupants of these launches hurled threats of bodily harm not only at the 'free labor' gang of stevedores which boarded the Algic but also at members of the Algic's crew themselves.

"Under this combination of circumstances the crew hastily called a meeting and voted that it was only common sense to stop work. Under the subsequent threat by the American Consul at Montevideo—a threat induced by the un-American 'throw them in irons' order of Chaiman Kennedy—the crew decided to return to work."

In its statement, the C. I. O. union took this parting shot at Ring:

"As a footnote to these observations it may be well to note that Mr. Dan S. Ring has been a Washington lawyer doing a certain amount of A. F. of L. business. He is labeled by the Washington newspaper story a 'labor representative' of the Maritime Commission. It is reported to us on reliable authority that Mr. Ring was employed without seeking the recommendation of either Commissioner Edward Moran, who is a member of the commission officially entrusted with labor problems, or Dr. Louis Bloch, who was designated the official labor relations expert for the commission."

Incident Not Mentioned.

The statement made no mention of the Algic crew's action in demanding that Capt. Gainard and other officers join a union or face a sit-down strike. This demand was made, according to Gainard, the day before the ship was to sail for South America. Other officers said that when the crew finally decided to go to work they announced that, so far as they were concerned, the officers were "on probation."

Chairman Kennedy, in announcing a new minimum wage scale for officers and men on Government-subsidized ships, said that the scale is approximately the same as the scale now generally in force on the West Coast as a result of agreements made by labor unions and operators.

For those other than officers, it ranges from $25 a month for bellboys to $120 a month for the chief steward. The pay for able seamen and firemen is set at $72.50 a month.

For officers the scale ranges from $115 a month to $265 for first officers on large vessels. F gineer officers will be paid from $115 to $390. The pay of the masters will continue to be a matter between them and the operating companies.

Radio operators are treated separately. Ships with only one operator are to pay a minimum of $125 and those with more than one are to pay the lowest in rank not less than $110.

Vacations of two weeks will be provided for officers and radio operators after each year of continuous service on a ship and members of the crew are to receive one week after the first year of continuous service and two weeks for each year thereafter. This is a new concession to crew members, who have never been allowed any vacation. It is expected to decrease the high labor turnover.

No regulations were adopted defining overtime work because, the commission said, "it has been charged that crews of many vessels are deliberately loitering during their regularly assigned hours of work in order to create a necessity for overtime."

Sobs at Slaying Trial

it is "difficult to draw any conclusion other than that Government spending of deficit-created funds must be replaced by private investment in productive wealth."

"Enterprise should be encouraged," he said, "and private investment—the willingness of owners of surplus funds to assume the risks of legitimate business enterprise—should, in such circumstances, be encouraged. Increased employment and continuing advances in living standards require conditions that will induce the renewed flow of private capital into productive investment."

Deplores Thin Market.

Discussing the relationship between capital investment and securities exchanges, Gay, who has been a frequent critic of New Deal regulatory and taxing measures, and who has charged that these measures have contributed to a stock market which has been "thin" and not widely supported, declared:

"It is a commonplace of any underwriter's office that it is almost impossible to distribute new issues when security prices are uncertain or are declining, or when markets are thin and inadequate."

The "important conclusion," he said, is that "the type of security market which best serves the investors' interest is also the one which best serves the publis welfare in the sense of promoting the flow of capital into new productive enterprises."

Judge Will Rule Today On Mrs. Hahn Evidence

Cincinnati, Oct. 21 (AP).—The State's fight to link blonde Anna Marie Hahn with the asserted poison deaths of three elderly men beside Jacob Wagner hung in the balance tonight.

Judge Charles S. Bell announced at the conclusion of a day's argument over the admissibility of evidence by the State that he would rule on the question when the murder trial is resumed tomorrow.

U.S. Charge Faces Brady Survivor

James Dalhover, who survived the blast of police bullets that killed two other members of the Brady gang in Bangor, Me., last week, will be prosecuted by the Justice Department for violating the Federal bank robbery law, officials said yesterday.

As they announced their attempt to indict Dalhover, Justice authorities admitted they still didn't know whether the Brady gangster would stand trial on State or Federal charges.

Meanwhile, Dalhover waited in Marion County Jail at Indianapolis, Ind. He has already been indicted by Indiana grand juries for killing Richard Rivers, Indianapolis police sergeant, and Paul Minneman, State policeman. Dalhover's companions, Al Brady and Clarence Lee Shaffer, jr., were killed by police and Federal agents in a gun battle at Bangor October 12.

test against a contract let to M. H. Pagenhardt, open shop contractor. They were back the next day after work on the Pagenhardt contract was temporarily held up.

Another walkout was called October 12, when another large contract was let to Pagenhardt. Later electricians, pipe coverers, sheet metal workers, asbestos workers, metal lathers and plasterers joined the steamfitters, paralyzing work on the air-conditioning system.

Lynn contends he had no choice but to let the second job to the open shop contractor, because his bid was $24,000 less than his nearest competitor. Lynn is required to accept the lowest responsible bid. He said work actually has not started on the second contract let September 1.

Botts said the strikers do not intend to return until the open shop contractor complies with union standards, or the contract is awarded to a union shop contractor.

And there the matter rested last night after nearly ten days of fruitless negotiations. Meanwhile, Capitol employes shivered in unheated offices and Congress waited for the heat (not from the White House) to be turned on again. In spots, the old Capitol heating apparatus was being stoked up to tide over the frigid spell.

Is Nearly Completed.

The new air-conditioning system is within 95 per cent of completion, Lynn said, and two or three weeks more work will finish the heating job.

In other respects, the Capitol was in readiness for a session expected to produce plenty of heat of its own. Yesterday, the Washington Fire Department was giving the old building a facial. Painters were finishing untidy wall patches in the interior, and elevators, after extensive repairs, were about ready to run again.

But it looked like a cold winter ahead.

Mexico Jails D. C. Man In Magazine 'Racket'

Mexico City, Oct. 21 (U.P.).—Mark Anthony Steele Brown, of Washington, D. C., today was lodged in the penitentiary for allegedly operating a magazine subscription racket here, while authorities continued investigation of his activities in this country.

Brown, who brought six American girls to Mexico to sell subscriptions on a 50 per cent commission basis, retained the services of a leading law firm to fight the charge. Brown was arrested yesterday as he was entering his automobile, which bore a District of Columbia license plate.

A Welcome Solution.

What bade fair to become another Corinna Loring mystery appears to have been solved. A man suspected of slaying Elmer J. Davidson, Washington lawyer, has been arrested and is reported to have confessed. To a community that has a distressing list of unsolved murders that is certainly welcome news.

For the first few hours after discovery of the crime, the trail was easily followed. Then the scent went cold, making a mockery of police predictions of an imminent arrest. However, the persistent and effective work of law enforcement officers, inspite of these difficulties, should serve to discourage what appears to be an upward trend of violence in these parts.

Credit for the apparent solution of the sordid crime goes primarily to a Virginia State police sergeant, though he must share it with Washington detectives who co-operated in some measure and with the Federal Bureau of Investigation which put its laboratories at his disposal. The accomplishment is particularly remarkable because State policemen in Virginia are not trained in criminal detection. Their job is traffic. In this case, however, they claimed jurisdiction and county authorities, who would normally have had authority, yielded.

Virginia, with its high murder and general crime rates, might well consider assigning more State officers to criminal problems if the sergeant's work in the Davidson case can be taken as a sample of their capabilities.

Mutiny On The Algic.

The tumultuous three month voyage of the S. S. Algic, whose officers have returned with tales of sit-down strikes, mutiny and murder, is unique only in respect to the number and persistence of the reported disorders. But it puts sharp emphasis on the urgent need of disciplining the intransigeant labor elements that have converted the vessels of the American Merchant Marine into scenes of strife.

Sudden strikes leave officers helpless, delay and interrupt sailings and make American citizens increasingly unwilling to entrust their lives and their property to ships flying the American flag. Stern measures must be taken to put a stop to these intolerable conditions if the United States is to keep its ships afloat on the high seas.

We now have legislation providing for collective bargaining and outlining the procedure required to determine the representative character of bargaining unions. That law applies to seamen as well as to other labor. We also have a Maritime Commission whose duty it is to inquire into standards of wages and living conditions of American seamen. The commission is actively pushing its inquiries and has already succeeded in effecting some improvement where distinctly substandard conditions exist.

Undoubtedly wretched quarters and poor food on many vessels have created a state of mind that makes American seamen susceptible to the appeal of labor agitators. Some allowance should be made for this fact in dealing with minor cases of insubordination. But it is impossible to find excuses for riotous demonstrations that endanger life and property and deprive officers of control over their vessels. If sit-down strikes and other mutinous acts are permitted to continue, we might as well abandon plans for the upbuilding of a merchant marine.

Fortunately, the fact that the mutiny of the S. S. Algic was quelled by an announcement that refusal to obey orders would result in imprisonment and eventual prosecution of the offenders shows that the situation is not beyond control.

Harsh punishment, of course, is not a solution of the basic problems that account in part at least for the lack of discipline among seagoing personnel. However, repeated defiance of authority has bred a state of mind that calls for firm handling on the part of those in command. Now that steps are being taken to correct conditions which are a just cause of grievance, the labor agitators and the other trouble makers who are responsible for such scenes as occurred on the Algic should be given short shrift. If they refuse to listen to reason, they should be subdued by invoking the full penalties of the law that apply to mutineers.

The London Compromise.

The London nonintervention committee has weathered another major crisis but under circumstances which raise considerable doubt as to whether the subsequent rejoicing in British and other circles is justified.

It is something, of course, that Italy and Germany have withdrawn their earlier demands that extension of belligerent rights to both sides in the Spanish conflict precede the withdrawal of foreign combatants from the Iberian Peninsula. It is, presumably, also a gain that the two Fascist powers have agreed to the appointment of an international commission to get the true facts regarding the numbers of foreigners in the loyalist and insurgent armies and, in principle, to the recall of these "volunteers." But all this does not necessarily mean that in the very near future the Spanish civil war will actually be confined to Spaniards.

Indeed, if past experience is any guide, the possibility of making the nonintervention agreement a complete reality would seem to have been very little advanced by the latest compromise. It will take time to organize the commission. More time will elapse before its investigation can be completed. And even when the full facts regarding outside participation in the Spanish conflict have been ascertained, haggling between the various powers as to how the withdrawal of foreign combatants is to be carried out may lead to a further delay.

In the meantime the maintenance of the status quo regarding the withdrawal problem clearly works to the advantage of Gen. Franco. Without foreign aid, it is doubtful whether he would have made any progress. Now, having taken Gijon and completed his conquest of northwest Spain, he can throw all his forces, including the foreign contingents, into a new assault on Madrid and Valencia in the hope of smashing loyalist resistance before any of his foreign troops are withdrawn.

Such calculations, no doubt, played their part in Mussolini's eleventh-hour readiness to break the deadlock at London by a show of moderation. By this action he gave up nothing and made a favorable impression on the British. What Great Britain feared most was a showdown on the Spanish issue. Indeed, the very essence of British policy ever since the civil war began has been to postpone such a showdown as long as possible and thus preserve the fictitious structure of European peace.

The French, for their part, are not so happy over the outcome of the London parley. They cannot view the possibility of an insurgent victory in Spain with the same apparent equanimity the British government has assumed. But France today is tied to the British chariot. It hesitates to take an independent line even when seemingly vital interests are concerned. So it is certain to acquiesce in the London compromise and hope for the best.

However, the French cannot hide from themselves the fact that, once again, the Fascist powers have scored a victory over the democratic states. Mussolini and Hitler have eaten their cake and have it, too. They can cite the London compromise as a sign of their readiness to co-operate in the maintenance of peace. But they have taken this action without weakening Gen. Franco by one iota.

A Job For Experts.

Transfer of employes from the PWA housing division to the United States Housing Authority was contemplated when the 1937 slum clearance law was enacted. The President was authorized to shift personnel along with libraries, equipment, records and the management of housing projects. Only in that way could the extensive housing projects launched by the PWA be completed without delay, confusion and extra expenses.

By announcing that he will take over the PWA housing staff, therefore, Administrator Straus of the USHA has made a logical first move toward the development of his own organization. There will be general satisfaction over the prospect that employes who have proved their worth in the housing division will have an opportunity to continue in the service.

At the same time it is well to remember that the PWA was set up on an emergency basis. Its employes were selected without the aid of a merit system. By contrast, the Housing Authority is designed to be a permanent agency. In part, at least, it must operate under the civil service system. Under these conditions, the USHA might reasonably require efficiency examinations of all housing division employes selected through patronage before giving them permanent status.

One of the weakest sections of the recent slum clearance act, unfortunately, is its personnel provisions. As that measure reached the floor of the House, it completely ignored requirements of the civil service law. Under the lash of criticism, Congress finally agreed that some gesture toward the merit system was essential. So it wrote in a civil service clause, but it exempted "such officers, attorneys and experts, and such employes whose compensation is in excess of $1,980 per annum, as may be necessary to carry out the purposes of this act."

These broad exemptions mean, of course, that Congress has made the USHA vulnerable to the pressure of spoilsmen, despite the technical and difficult nature of its task. That severe handicap upon independent and efficient administration of the slum clearance act may result in costly mistakes unless the housing authority has the courage to set up a merit system of its own. Mr. Straus' reaction to this defect in the law will doubtless provide the first real test of his policies as director of this new housing experiment.

A Problem Of Co-ordination.

The dedication of the new Federal Reserve Building gave President Roosevelt an opportunity to pay gracious and deserved tribute to the late President Wilson and to Senator Glass for the part they played in creating the Federal Reserve System. The occasion was not suited to discussion of those controversial issues which have sometimes brought from Senator Glass sharp criticism of reserve policies and Administration proposals.

The President properly confined his remarks to the general objectives of our monetary and credit policies about which there is likely to be little difference of opinion. The mission of the Federal Reserve System, like that of other agencies devoted to the public service, is, as he said, "to gain for all of our people the greatest attainable measure of economic well-being, the largest degree of economic security and stability."

The President was especially forceful in urging the need for co-ordinating our monetary and credit machinery with other instruments of government to bring about the most effective utilization of our resources. He emphasized the limitations imposed upon those who guide monetary and credit policies by stressing the importance of "the other major powers and policies of government which influence the country's economic life." This indirectly calls attention to the fact that the Federal Reserve authorities must serve the Government as well as business, and adapt their policies to fiscal plans they cannot expect to control.

At the present time, for example, the credit policies of the Federal Reserve system are determined to a large extent by the necessity of financing Federal deficits. They cannot be shaped to the needs of private business only. It might easily happen, too, that Federal Reserve Board efforts to check inflationary price increases or to arrest deflationary declines would conflict with other Government policies tending to produce the opposite results. In short, an effective monetary and credit policy presupposes a consistent governmental program directed toward attainment of compatible economic objectives. Monetary powers, as the President says, are "not omnipotent," nor do they possess a "peculiar magic."

It is well to have these facts impressed upon the public mind after years of preachments and experimentations that have given rise to exaggerated ideas of the influence exerted by monetary and credit policies upon business activity. The contribution which the Federal Reserve System, under wise guidance, can make to future economic progress will be all the greater if we arrive at a better understanding of the difficult problems of co-ordination to which the dedicatory address was largely devoted.

Felix M. Warburg.

Felix M. Warburg, dead at the age of 66, was a man whose avocations greatly overshadowed his vocation. A banker and descendant of bankers, he achieved signal success in the field of finance, both in his native Germany and in this country whose adopted son he became 32 years ago.

But he will best be remembered for his very generous philanthropies, his wholehearted and effective participation in a host of cultural, relief and civic enterprises and, above all, by his deep devotion to the cause of improving the lot of his fellow men.

This devotion was the mainspring of his character. It found expression in many ventures in which he participated and frequently led on behalf of his co-religionists both here and abroad. But the range of his philanthropy and his humanitarianism transcended all factors of race and religion and embraced all those who needed help.

America and the world are very much poorer for his passing.

Nazi "Trivialities."

From the Atlanta Georgian.

The Nazi government in Germany objects to newspapermen who pay too much attention to "trivialities"—as several foreign correspondents have discovered in recent weeks.

Some of the "trivialities" which must have embarrassed Chancellor Hitler as reported to the outside world include:

Thirty per cent fewer books are being read by Germans since the Nazi rule came in power.

The use of wood as fuel in the future has been forbidden by Gen. Goering, although for centuries thousands of Germans have burned only wood in their stoves.

Farmers who refuse to turn over all their wheat and rye to the government must pay fines ranging up to 100,000 marks.

"Especially obnoxious" penitentiary sentences may be imposed on stubborn farmers who insist what they raise is their own, merely because they raised it.

Panacea For The Farmer.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir:

In this cock-eyed era of exploiting the present and mortgaging the future for spectacular reclamation projects—farm and crop conservation planning, etc., are well enough in their way, but bound to throw further large areas of our domain into the maw of land speculation—it is refreshing to note here and there a gleam of real economic intelligence.

Years ago a California statesman told our farmers they couldn't raise 50-cent corn on acres at suburban lot prices. Now comes a voice from the heart of the great farm region, "The Nebraska Farmer-Union Farmer" telling its subscribers that co-operation will not solve the farm problem, nor will anything else, if the increase in farmers' incomes is allowed to be absorbed in land prices. It points to the only true and lasting remedy, as advocated from experience in Denmark, which is to place all taxes on land values. Such a remedy would restrict private land holding to profitable use by the holder and so preserve private possession in line with a free economy.

Our farmers' plight is due not so much to low prices for his products, as to the outrageously inflated values of the land from which he must raise them. Our town and city home-seekers and industry in general are as much affected by such conditions as are the farmers, hence the need for general application of the remedy.

We are too much obsessed, especially in our organized industrial ranks, with a Government fostered psychology that sees more in $2 that will buy one yard of goods than in $1 that will buy two yards of the same material. We have long used the taxing power destructively to kill or cripple worthy industries. Why not try using it constructively to eradicate the most noxious and widespread of all activities, a sore on the body-politic that compares with Wall Street as a carbuncle to a pimple. W. ENCEE.

"States May Secede."

To the Editor of The Post—Sir:

When the President proposes the enactment of legislation clearly in violation of the Constitution; when the Congress enacts such proposals; when the Supreme Court of the United States, in deciding cases arising under such statutes, resorts, in certain cases, to strained reasoning in upholding the validity of certain statutes enacted by the Congress, and when the President appoints, and the Senate confirms, to the bench of the Supreme Court a man whose expressed views are to the effect that such statutes are valid, and that the so-called program of the Administration must be upheld at all costs, the Constitution to the contrary notwithstanding; when, in other words, the three branches of the Federal Government set forth on a path of "usurped power" and when the Administration in power will not resort to the methods of "amending" the Constitution as provided by the Constitution, are the several States of the Union "legally bound by the Constitution" to submit to such a general evasion and usurpation of the provisions of the Constitution by the Federal Government?

There is no provision in the Constitution to support the view that the States are legally bound by the Constitution itself to submit to a reign of lawlessness on the part of the National Government, and the ratifications of such States as New York, Virginia, Rhode Island, and others, as well as the expressed intention and understanding of the vast majority of the delegates in the ratifying State conventions, together with the prevailing opinion of the men of those days, support the view that in such a situation the several States may secede from the Union.

Favors Boycott.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir:

I was very much impressed with T. A. B. Barefoot's recent letter in The Post. His reasoning is logical and convincing. It is my belief that the great majority of Americans sympathize with the Chinese people and regard the Japanese military as brigands and pirates. Barefoot is quite right when he says that the most effective way for us to handle the situation is to boycott Japanese goods.

Former Secretary of State Stimson says the same thing. The recent conventions of organized labor went on record for the use of labor's traditional weapon—the boycott. Since modern wars have an economic base, it is logical to undermine that base by refusing to buy Japanese goods—especially silk. The women of America can tie Japan's war machine into a knot by refusal to buy silk goods. Millions of dollars are poured into Japan's war chest by American silk purchases. If American women and girls will quit buying silk, Japan will lose out. ARISTOTLE.

Dr. Townsend's Idea.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir:

The idea of pensions for the veterans of life, known under various names but publicized by Dr. Townsend, is just a natural step along the road of democracy.

When production had reached enormous proportions back in 1929, the whole structure of distribution crashed down, and our best minds said that the only hope lay in plowing under crops and killing the little pigs. The powers in Washington took a leaf from British capitalism, and fastened on the backs of labor the social security law, so as to make the veterans of life pay for their own funerals.

Dr. Townsend's idea has not been indorsed by the Socialists and the Single Taxers, because it is considered a part of the order of capitalism, but it is really just a businesslike adjustment of the machine we call "government" to suit changed conditions.

The money spent each 30 days by the aged will circulate to all parts of the Republic, and the Townsend plan will act like the electric pump which circulates the heat to your radiator. EDMOND FONTAINE.

Incident In France.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir:

I read with interest in The Post of October 18 the article headed "Owner Who Fled Stricken Titanic Dies as Recluse." This brings to my mind an incident of the World War.

I was a war worker in the Y. M. C. A. in France from 1917 to 1919. I was in a French train and in uniform, returning to my post. There was in the compartment with me quite a number, mostly women. A French officer entered and there was no available seat. A woman carrying a baby in her arms rose to her feet and motioned to the officer to take her seat. To my amazement he sat down in her seat without a word of thanks.

I stared at him for a moment and then blazed out, in very poor French: "A thing like that could never happen in America!" "And a terrible loss like the Titanic could never happen in French waters," he answered, and his eyes snapped. "I do not understand," I said. "Why, the men would have been saved and the women and children would have perished." I looked so amazed that he went on to say, "The men were able to bear arms in defense of France." "But," I said, "who bear the soldiers for France?"

From Klan to Court.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir:

It is undeniable that Justice Black made a mistake in joining the Ku Klux Klan. His friends claim it was necessary for him to do so in order to be elected Senator from Alabama. "If you can't beat 'em, jine 'em," has been the recourse of politicians from time immemorial, and Justice Black is not the first one to use questionable means at hand for political purposes.

So the whole matter narrows itself down to this: Mr. Black wanted to be Senator from Alabama. He felt he could be of service to his State and Nation, especially in loosening the stranglehold the big corporate interests had on his native State and the Nation. He could reach his goal only by currying favor with the Klan. He joined them and won, and then resigned.

His record of service in the United States Senate for 11 years is an open book. He has consistently and intelligently fought for the regulation of corporate greed and privilege and for the rights of the masses.

The grounds alleged for unseating Black are camouflage. The real reason for the attack is because the great corporate interests know that those eminent jurists Stone, Brandeis and Cardozo have an ally who like them, will exert his will and ability in construing the Constitution as it should be construed—for the welfare and protection of all the people. C. A. GRAHAM.

From a British Reader.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir:

As a member of the reading public in Great Britain, I feel that the article in The Post of October 5 reading: ". . . Doubtless the Duke will soon yearn for the peace and quiet of Austria, together with the boredom from which he now seeks to escape" is very bad journalism.

It does not seem to occur to American men of the press that His Royal Highness, the Duke of Windsor, did not forfeit his prestige or his rank as a member of the English royal family when he renounced the throne.

If Washington sets any value upon intelligent and unbiased world opinion, she will not prejudice this, or belittle the greatness of "the press" by using it as a medium for the expression of the personal animosities of a certain section of American society.

To Keep Out Of War.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir:

There is one thing which no President or small group of men should have the power to do—and that is to decide that a nation must go to war. This decision should come through a referendum to the people and only in that way.

If Mr. Roosevelt really wants to keep us out of a war, he had better stop expressing his opinion as to which are "aggressor" nations, etc. His idea of preserving peace for us is very much like Woodrow Wilson's. Roosevelt is dreaming a beautiful, altruistic dream which he hopes to realize through his charming voice, his smile and his great "mandate from the people."

The best thing that he could do to keep us out of the European mess would be to keep absolutely still and do nothing!

How can we think of one so vitally alive as Natalie Prichett as dead? Never have I known a more attractive or dynamic personality. She was sweet to everyone who crossed her path. BESSIE LEE POWELL DUNLOP.

The Post Impressionist

"Dumping Ground" Indeed!

IN a facetious moment, the other day in his column "Over the Coffee," Mr. Harlan Miller said: "I propose that every American city and village establish its own museum (there are enough empty storerooms nowadays) to which families could donate family relics which clutter up attics—the chair in which Bryan sat when he appeared at the local Chautauqua, the spade with which the mayor broke ground for the fire station, the Chinese sword the local squire brought back from Shanghai, the frock Nellie Gumdrop wore when she was chosen Miss All-State."

Mr. Miller's proposal is a good one, but gracious me! It's a pretty small town that doesn't already have its museum.

The day the first white man set foot on the soil of the New World he began treasuring his past and exercising his collecting instinct. By the time they had herded all the Indians onto a few reservations, cut down most of the trees, and shot or trapped off the wild birds and fur-bearers, Americans began to be really museum conscious. Since the redskins couldn't be preserved themselves, perhaps their relics could. It would be nice to be able to gaze, safely, upon their pottery and beads in a glass case. It would be "cultural," too, to know what a buffalo or a passenger pigeon looked like, even though stuffed; as well as some of those foreign "critters"—say, the babiroussa, the bane of spelling bees, or the aardvark, whose name, like Abou Ben Adhem's, led all the rest.

To make a long story short, there are now something like 2,000 museums in the United States. The American Association of Museums finds that new public museums are being established at the rate of about one a week and new buildings and new wings erected at the rate of about one every two weeks, and that the overwhelming majority of new museums are appearing in places of less than 100,000 population.

These figures do not include the thousands of antlered Boy Scout lofts, private stamp, coin, art, and book collections, and a good many high schools and colleges that have started little museums in connection with their biology, geology, or industrial departments. In a way these are just as much museums as the Smithsonian itself ("dumping ground" to Mr. Miller), for many of them have a way of growing into something important.

Museums are one thing we Americans take seriously, for they fall within that great American ideal—education. No longer do we have to go to London or Paris or Rome to visit great museums—we have just as good right here in Washington, or in New York or Chicago or Philadelphia. We have even filled them partly with Europe's treasures.

Of course, there may still be, as F. P. A. once said, many Americans "who have visited the museums and galleries of France and Italy who would scorn to go to the Smithsonian, yet were the same thing in these foreign lands they would not care to come home and say they had not seen it, yet would be the first to scream about the Constitution, and down with the traitor and up with the star." But the numbers of such must be getting fewer for there are over 2,000,000 visitors to the Smithsonian every year.

The current museum program is a stupendous one. Mellon has just given $10,000,000 for the new National Gallery of Art. The American Museum of Natural History in New York proposes to raise $10,000,000 for a 10-year development plan and increase its annual income. The Pennsylvania Museum of Art has announced a 10-year program that will involve the addition of $10,428,000 to the funds for the museum and $5,117,000 for its textile and industrial schools. The University of Pennsylvania Museum is raising $500,000 for a special bicentennial celebration. Six junior museum centers at public schools in New York City are planned for this fall.

And so on down to the small fry: There is a national baseball museum at Cooperstown, N. Y., that has been housing its collection in the village club building, but it is now going to have a new fireproof Colonial-brick museum building right on Main street and $2,500 at its disposal. The Florida Legislature has just appropriated $50,000 for the St. Augustine Historical Preservation and Restoration Association, and a museum is part of the plan.

There are even traveling museums—one of them, an exhibit of the work of Midwest artists, is starting out this fall to tour eight States. A new museum (the floors covered with linoleum) is approaching completion in the new Interior Building.

No, it won't be long until every American town does have its own museum, for it is a fact that we are incurably interested in the minutiae of our past. Perhaps, after all, Bryan's chair, the mayor's spade, the Chinese sword and Nellie Gumdrop's frock are just as important to most of us as the more animated exhibits in State capitols, cocktail bars, cinema halls, or the next automobile show.

Fair Enough

What Caused The Crash?

THE ONE absolutely foolproof subject on which any man's opinion is as good as another's is the antics of the stock market, a subdivision of the wonderful, inscrutable mystery of money and gold.

In the panic of 1929 and thenceforth, which was euphemistically known as the depression, we were soothed from day to day with some of the high-soundingest ignorance that ever soiled the face of good white newsprint, not only from financiers and gamblers and theoretical economists in shiny serge who had never seen more than $500 cash in all their lives, but from journalistic interpreters who had seen their own two cents go down the drain the very day that fate—or was it the economic royalists and well-fed clubmen?—pulled the plug.

It was Ivor Kreuger, the Swedish Ponzi, who stabbed our dolly with a jacknife and let the sawdust out. No, it wasn't Kreuger; it was the black-hearted Republicans, mainly poor old Herbert Hoover, who hadn't been in office long enough to get his chair warm before the boom blew up in his face and splattered him with a hatred which was really due to his mumbling hypocrisy on prohibition.

• • • •

THEN IT WAS the bankers who put on airs behind their curly bronze barricades and spent the afternoon playing golf. Then the blame touched the men who loaned away our honest savings to spiggoty politicians in Latin America in return for emaciated bonds.

It was the holding company. It was lack of regulation. It was war in which the money countries of the world shot away the pay of generations yet to come. It was sun spots, throwing puny humanity out of kilter, and a judgment and comeuppance from above.

It was all of those—and the air rang with such words as "fiduciary" and "debenture" and "deteriorated technical position of the market," but still the figures fell, faster in some cases than the mortal shells of hopeless victims whose despairing leaps from their penthouse terraces came to be a subject of popular humor. And still if you were to ask a hundred common men today what caused the panic of 1929 you would get no intelligent answer, and a hundred experts would fog up their replies with so much confusion that you wouldn't know what they were saying, nor would they.

There is nothing—not even religion—in which men have more interest, and of which they have less understanding than money or values or wealth, and what happens to it when all of a sudden it ain't.

We are told that 15, 20, nobody knows how many billions have been wiped out in the recent decline in the stock market.

• • • •

WHAT HAPPENED to it, then? Was it food or bales of clothing dumped in the sea, new automobiles by the hundred thousands shoved into the Grand Canyon, or thousands of barrels of fine, nutritious whisky poured down the sewer, or were whole cities of good livable homes destroyed by earthquake or fire? Apparently not.

The horror happened in some figures waltzing across an illuminated electric board in a broker's office, and not an ounce of any material thing necessary for the life and comfort of man was lost in the process. Nevertheless, we are hearing and we shall hear much more about overregulation now, about bears in London, and that dreadful paradox—the superabundance which afflicts a nation almost as sorely as famine and makes men shiver and starve.

Kreuger is dead these many years now, and Al Wiggin has long been retired with the hearty wishes, though not necessarily of the best, of those who also wish to God they never had run foul of him. And old, sobbing Sam Insull, now that the heat is definitely off, is said to be on his way to a twilight of ease in England—another marvel of economical management by a man who protested at his trial that he was penniless and forced to ride the 10-cent bus for lack of taxi fare.

What, then, has caused all this? So you really want to know? Then don't read the financiers, the gamblers, the shiny pants economists or the experts, but go down to the corner and ask the bartender. He won't know, either, but he will tell you what he doesn't know in language you can understand—which is more than may be said of the others.

The Secret Visit.

9 A. M.—Skipper of official New York welcoming launch carrying city officials down bay says he has no idea of the purpose of trip. Thousands of New Yorkers on excursion boats riot when told newspaper men are in vicinity, shouting, "Is there no privacy?"

9:30 A. M.—Capt. Mike McGillicuddy, of the tug Jessie Ipswich, is relieved of duty for tooting horn at ship carrying mysterious couple. Demands reinstatement on ground he didn't know it was all confidential.

9:45 A. M.—Ships news reporters climb aboard liner, locate Duke of Windsor and ask him if he is the Duke of Windsor. Duke says, "You will have to see my publicity man." Lady reporter locates the Duchess and asks her if she is the Duchess. Duchess says "See the Duke."

10 A. M.—Motorcycle police ask their officers what they are there for and are told it is a secret. Thousands of clerks and stenographers in Broadway skyscrapers are asked by employers why they are leaning out windows and tearing up phone books. They reply that their activities are of a private character and that they therefore do not wish them to be a subject of public information.

Cicero Fulpan Lashes At 'Isms'

Petunia Constituents Learn Of K.K.K.K. Affiliation.

By Louis M. Jiggitts,
Special Correspondence of The Post.

CICERO FULPAN, M. C.

Detour,
Sept. 29, 1937.

Congressman Cicero Fulpan,
Petunia.

Dear Congressman Fulpan:

I am sorry I missed you when you were in Detour, but I had some important things to do at that time.

I have noticed a great deal in the papers lately about secret societies like the Nazis and Fascists and Communists, and I would like to know what you are going to do about them in Congress. People here have noticed that other Congressmen have talked about all these isms and Hezekiah Hawks said yesterday that it is funny you have not said anything unless you are one of them. He said people are beginning to wonder what you are.

Please let me know by return mail how you stand on them. Yours very truly, SHED SHINGLE.

P. S. What is the difference between the Nazis and the Communists, anyhow?

Petunia.
Sept. 30, 1937.

Mr. Shed Shingle,
Detour.

Dear Sir:

I regret that the Congressman is absent at this time on a very important mission in Washington. He has been making a private investigation of agricultural conditions and expects to confer with the regular Congressional committee making this same study for the next session of Congress. It is expected that the committee's investigation and Congressman Fulpan's report will enable Congress to frame a bill that will prove highly satisfactory to all, including the farmers.

I am glad to inform you that the Congressman is opposed to all isms.

Yours sincerely,
WILLA DOOLITTLE,
Secretary.

P. S. The only difference I see is that one knows Hitler is the boss and the other knows Stalin is.

Detour.
Oct. 1, 1937.

Congressman Cicero Fulpan,
Petunia.

Dear Congressman Fulpan:

I hope you have returned from Washington safely.

I told Hezekiah Hawks about you being opposed to all isms and he said he didn't know about that but he guessed you really were opposed to Americanism from the the way you had voted in Congress.

I hope you and the other committee will be able to do something for the farmer too. Please let me know in the meantime what you are going to do about all the isms you are opposed to. Your very truly,
SHED SHINGLE.

P. S. Do you belong to any secret society?

Petunia,
Oct. 2, 1937.

Mr. Shed Shingle,
Detour.

Dear Sir:

The Congressman returned today but was so exhausted by the magnificent reception given him by the Petunia Progressive Citizens' Band and the wonderful speech of Mayor Fitz that he has been unable to come to the office.

I am sure that Mr. Hawks has misunderstood my letter as I can assure you that the Congressman is not opposed to Americanism. In fact he has often said that American citizenship is the highest form of citizenship ever invented in the history of mankind and that he was prouder to say "I am an American than that "I am a Roman."

You can rest assured that the Congressman will help the farmer When he gives serious consideration to any subject you can expect results, and I feel certain that the relief the farmer gets will eventually prove to be a Fulpan relief. Yours sincerely,
WILLA DOOLITTLE,
Secretary.

P. S. The only secret society the Congressman has ever belonged to was the K. K. K. K.

Detour,
Oct. 4, 1937.

Congressman Cicero Pulpan,
Petunia.

Dear Congressman Fulpan:

I am glad that you do not oppose Americanism in spite of Hezekiah Hawks, but when I told Miss Fannie Blotz, who you didn't give the postoffice to in Detour back in the spring when you made Zeke Zeegler the postmaster instead, about your secret society she said it was time you explained why you joined the K. K. K. K. She said she wasn't surprised, however, at anything you did since you made Zeke Zeegler postmaster here. It seems that she and Mr. Hawks who you also didn't give the postoffice to at the same time don't like you. Miss Blotz, who is the champion slogan and pun maker of Detour, said she was going to write a slogan about you and the four K's which she said would burn you up if you didn't explain it.

I still would like to know what you are going to do about the isms which are beginning to worry me. Yours very truly,
SHED SHINGLE.

Petunia,
Oct. 5, 1937.

Mr. Shed Shingle,
Detour.

Dear Sir:

I regret that the Congressman has found it necessary to go to Biddlesville for an important conference with farm leaders, but in his absence I am glad to give you the information you desire.

You want to know what the Congressman is going to do about the isms. I am glad to inform you that I am certain he will give them his most serious consideration. This I feel sure will be encouraging to you.

I am afraid that there is some misapprehension about the K. K. K. K. This is a local Greek society at Fale College which the Congressman joined when he was there and means Kappa Kappa Kappa Kappa.

Assuring you that it has been a pleasure to correct Miss Blotz in this matter, I am yours sincerely,
WILLA DOOLITTLE,
Secretary.

Detour,
Oct. 6, 1937.

Congressman Cicero Fulpan,
Petunia.

Dear Congressman Fulpan:

I told Miss Fannie Blotz about the Greek society and she wanted to know why you are so much against the Greeks and said as far as she knew neither one of them here had ever done anything to you.

She said that Mr. Ludovicus Poppacornus, who runs the American Cafe here, and his cousin, Mr. Tomatopolis, are some of the best citizens in Detour, and that Mr. Poppacornus would certainly recognize a good postmaster when he saw one in the middle of the road, which is more than some people can do.

What are you still doing about the isms? Yours very truly,
SHED SHINGLE.

Petunia,
Oct. 7, 1937.

Mr. Shed Shingle,
Detour.

Dear Sir:

I am sure that as soon as the Congresman returns to the office he will be delighted to explain to you about the Kappa Kappa Kappa Kappa and in the meantime I am glad to inform you that the Congressman is not opposed to the Greeks and that he holds Mr. Poppacornus and Mr. Tomatopolis as two of his dearest friends. Yours sincerely,
WILLA DOOLITTLE,
Secretary.

Detour,
Oct. 8, 1937.

Congressman Cicero Fulpan,
Petunia.

Dear Congressman Fulpan:

I hope you have now returned to your office, as there is a great deal of excitement here about you opposing the Greeks. When I told Mr. Poppacornus about it he said he couldn't understand it, as you always ate at his restaurant when you were in Detour and he never charged you any more than he did any regular eater.

I am also disturbed about my boy, who wrote today that he had joined a society at State College which he said was secret and required $25. He sent me the name of the society, too, which I inclose. If you know what this means I would appreciate it. It looks like Greek to me. Yours very truly, SHED SHINGLE.

P. S. I saw in the paper about some Congressmen being on a Congressional junket. What does that mean? I always thought junket was a dessert.

Petunia,
Oct. 9, 1937.

Mr. Shed Shingle,
Detour.

Dear Sir:

The Congressman has not returned but, in his absence, it looks like Greek to me, too. But I am sure he will be delighted to explain it to you as soon as he returns, as he was considered quite a Greek scholar while at Fale College. In fact, he was so well known for his Greek learning that he was nicknamed Pluto. Yours sincerely,
WILLA DOOLITTLE,
Secretary.

P. S. I suppose it could be called a dessert for deserving Congressmen. It is usually a nice trip at Government expense.

Detour,
Oct. 9, 1937.

Congressman Cicero Fulpan,
Petunia.

Dear Congressman Fulpan:

I took my boy's letter to Mr. Tomatopolis yesterday and asked him what kind of society that was and he said that it looked like old Greek to him and he was a new Greek, but the best he could make out was that it meant "Get Wise to Yourself." I have written my boy asking him about this and told him that I didn't want him opposing anybody as some day he might turn out to be a Congressman like you and people would be asking him why he did it.

You had better come to Detour and explain the Kappa Kappa Kappa Kappa at once. Miss Blotz has already written the slogan which she said she was going to use for the next campaign, which is Kallous Kongressman Kombats Kreeks. If you are still not combating them, you had better explain yourself before it's too late. Yours very truly, SHED SHINGLE.

Petunia,
Oct. 11, 1937.

Mr. Shed Shingle,
Detour.

Dear Sir:

I have been absent studying the agricultural conditions. I have also been taking under consideration a special session, and if one is held you may be certain that it will be based largely upon my confidential report which I sent to Washington recently.

The Kappa Kappa Kappa Kappa is merely a local Greek letter fraternity at Fale College and is, of course, not opposed to the Greeks. I assure you that I am not opposed to any one. My life has been built upon the enduring friendship of the masses and I feel that I may say with some degree of pride that I love the masses and the masses believe in me. Yours very truly,
CICERO FULPAN, M. C.

Detour,
Oct. 13, 1937.

Congressman Cicero Fulpan,
Petunia.

Dear Congressman Fulpan:

I am glad that you have returned to your office and I am also delighted to learn that you are not opposed to anybody. You don't need to worry about my boy any more as Mr. Tomatopolis was right and I guess if he can get wise to himself for $25 he will be doing a lot more than some people ever do.

Now that you have settled the agriculture problem I hope that you will tell me what you are going to do about the isms which are still bothering me. Yours very truly,
SHED SHINGLE.

Petunia,
Oct. 15, 1937.

Mr. Shed Shingle,
Detour.

Dear Sir:

I can assure you that I am giving the matter mentioned in your recent letter my most serious consideration at this time. There are several other Congressmen who have been quite active in studying the activities of the Communists and the Nazis, and I shall certainly confer with them immediately upon my arrival in Washington for the special session which has been called as I anticipated. Your very truly,
CICERO FULPAN, M. C.

Detour,
Oct. 16, 1937.

Congressman Cicero Fulpan,
Petunia.

Dear Congressman Fulpan:

Now that you have decided to hold a special session of Congress, I still want to know what you are going to do about the isms. Yours very truly,
SHED SHINGLE.

Petunia,
Oct. 18, 1937.

Mr. Shed Shingle,
Detour.

Dear Sir:

At the moment I do not care to divulge my plans in respect to the Nazis, the Fascists and the Communists, but you may be certain that the plans which I have formulated will be largely followed in Congress. I trust that you will not consider me lacking in modesty if I remind you that my many years of leadership at the Nation's Capitol have given me the opportunity and the means of fulfilling the wishes of my constituents.

Assuring you that it has been a pleasure to explain myself openly and frankly in this matter and further assuring you that you need have no further worries about these matters in view of the action which I contemplate at the special session of Congress, I am, yours sincerely,
CICERO FULPAN, M. C.

Detour,
Oct. 19, 1937.

Congressman Cicero Fulpan,
Petunia.

Dear Congressman Fulpan:

Just as I quit worrying about the Nazis and Communists I see where the budget has got more unbalanced. Why is it these days something has always got to worry somebody? How can the Government get so far in debt and still keep in business? Every time I get in debt I get worried, don't you?

Please let me know by return mail what you are going to do about it. Very truly yours,
SHED SHINGLE.

Petunia,
Oct. 19, 1937.

Mr. Shed Shingle,
Detour.

Dear Mr. Shingle:

I can assure you that you need have no fear over the condition of the budget. I have given the matter my most serious consideration and I have determined that we leaders will see to it that the budget shall be balanced. You may rest assured that we shall accomplish this on or before 1940. By that date America will be enjoying its greatest prosperity. I have the utmost confidence in my plan. What I intend to do in 1940 will, I feel sure, give the country much food for thought.

Trusting that you will now forget the budget and enjoy the anticipation of returning prosperity, I am, very sincerely,
CICERO FULPAN, M. C.

1821 To 1861

By Rae Lewis

American Life.

WE SCREAM TOO much for the writing done from a "proper perspective," forgetting or not admitting that the current taste before vicarious digestion may be just as important to the seeker after truth. There is always plenty of posterity to take care of the rationalizing with history and other phases. This account of the 40 years from 1821 to 1861 was written in great part not later than 1864, when it was published in England, and while some of it was even then a reminiscence, it was personal experience.

Facts surrounding the author and the writing of the book are pertinent and cannot be ignored, and since it is not autobiographical in the usual sense, it is proper to give certain personal items here. Thomas Low Nichols was born in 1815 and became, in turn, a medical student, a convert to the food-reform ideas of Graham, inventor of the bread, and then a journalist with an adventurous life.

After his marriage to Mrs. Mary Neal Gove, also a reformer, he and his wife established the Memnonia Institute in 1856 at Yellow Springs, Ohio. Veering from Fourier more and more, this group, which horrified many who believed it an establishment for free love, became more and more religious and a year later eight, including the Nicholses, became Roman Catholics. Just about to start a new reform publication two years later, the War Between the States upset everything for them, and they left the States permanently in 1861. In London they were well received and settled down as journalists, but several years later they returned to their earlier strong convictions concerning health reform.

THIS BOOK, then, is written, by a man we would term an exile, but none of this attitude worms into the book. As he himself says, he has not borne down on the faults of his native land; in fairness he desired that his patriotism should not be impugned.

Thomas Low Nichols found no phase or subject too difficult for expression of some sort; but he frankly didn't make the effort to encompass them entirely nor to attempt treatises each of which would have been a volume in itself. He didn't know or see everything, but he knew that. His newspapering and other training in writing enabled him to write with what we call a "news angle" and verbosity creeps in only in the material added ten years later. The information in certain parts is erroneous, we now know, as in the discussion of yellow fever contagion carriers.

NICHOLS DEFINITELY had little humor, but for us much that he said is entertaining and, unintentionally of course, amusing. In a severe manner, he excoriates spitting as the "vice of America." His personal reaction to Fourth of July celebrations will be a dear delight to those who have suffered for more than two days of unceasing rocketing, ceremonies, and other violent observances.

As far as he was concerned, there was little of interest to say about this country west of the Mississippi; at least he said nothing except to advocate it as a good settling country for emigrants. Neither does he concern himself with the rest of the world except England and a few references to France.

Names, great or otherwise, in personal relation to the writer, do not appear very often, although he must have known many figures of the times who left a mark somewhere. Perhaps it would have been even more valuable to us had he done so, for he was with William Lloyd Garrison when he was besieged by rioters in Boston, he worked for Bennett, and the only man to whom he gave a separate chapter was Horace Greeley. Whittier, Poe, Herman Melville and Fritz-Green Halleck, as instances, he also knew, but he made no attempt to trade on their fame. Washingtonians especially will enjoy his references to the Nicholas Longworth, of Cincinnati, who died in 1862.

IT IS WORTH anyone's time to step up and take this close look at history through the aid of a man who foresaw that much would change and be enlarged upon, and yet was keenly aware of his own times and their fine parts. He looked to the future only as a possible period of betterment, of reforms in politics, of medical progress, of social and religious tolerance devoid of the inconsistencies of his own day; but he liked that day very well and he will make you like it.

WILLIAM MOULTON MARSTON had a book published October 1 called "Try Living" . . . Dr. Marston, in case you didn't know, is the discoverer of the "lie detector" . . . I guess he thought entirely too many people were subscribing to the thesis, "Why Not Try Lying?"

NEXHMIE ZAIMI, the young American girl whose autobiography, "Daughter of the Eagle," is recommended by the American Library Association, has returned to Wellesley College, where she has a scholarship . . . Last year she earned her expenses at that college by washing dishes . . . No wonder she wrote her publishers joyously, "No More Dishes" . . . That's almost enough to make it worth while to write a book these days.

• • • •

AN APPRENTICE TO an engraver, aged 15, once scribbled with chalk on the gate of a country place, as boys often do when they are idling about, his name . . . It was "Jean-Jacques Rousseau" . . . And he added, for good measure, "Citizen of Geneva, 1727" . . . So "Citizen of Geneva" is the title selected by Charles William Hendel for a volume which he translated and edited of selections from the letters of Rousseau . . . Wonder if Pen Hogan has ever found a title for this new book?

• • • •

ACCORDING TO Jack Lindsay, whose "Marc Antony, His World and His Contemporaries" has just been published, the love affair of Antony and Cleopatra," is of great psychological interest as a spectacle of decaying wills. It is also more than that. It is a representation of the social forces of the period. Its discords are the same as the inner contradictions of the society in which it is staged. By clarifying its symbolism we discover the class-forces, the economic needs and social forms, which were clashed in the last eddy of the Caesarean revolution" . . . Now, what do youse tink of dat, Miss Haworth?

• • • •

I'M ALWAYS HEARING stories about young authors who appear in "Story" getting letters from publishers asking if they're working on anything that might be a book . . . This week I actually received a book which was discovered in just this way . . . It is "The Running of the Deer" by Dan Wickenden . . . It almost makes me believe in fairies to hear success stories like this.

• • • •

AT LOUROUX, FRANCE, on September 3, 1822, Eugent Delacroix, started a journal . . . He was 24 at the time and for 40 years he kept an almost daily journal of everything he did, saw, and felt . . . At his death, he called his housekeeper and told her to destroy his journals . . . She promised to do so, but instead hid them and later turned them over to Andrieu, Delacroix's chief assistant . . . They were published, but only after much deletion and dilution . . . Now these deleted portions have been found and were published on October 8 under the title of "The Journals of Delacroix" . . . Apparently the servant problem is no new thing.

Diana Patrick, whose book, "Bird of Bright Plumage," which will be out next month, says she was amused by the skepticism of some American reviewers of her last novel as to the authenticity of the place-names she employed in it . . . Giggleswick, she declares, has a famous school and Appletreewick is a lovely moorland village . . . Kettlewell, it seems, is the home of the well-known novelist, Cutcliffe Hyne . . . Sounds like something out of Wodehouse by Woollcott . . . I don't see how Americans can look askance at any name if they can keep a straight face when thinking of Oshkosh, Keokuk, Kokomo and Kalamazoo.

Rail Executive Admits False Finance Report

Says Van Sweringen Told Him to Buy Securities; Funds Left on Books.

By the Associated Press.

Senate investigators drew yesterday from William Wyer, secretary-treasurer of the Missouri Pacific Railway, an acknowledgment that he had falsely reported the financial condition of the Missouri Pacific Transportation Co. in 1931 and 1932.

Sidney Kaplan, investigator for the Senate's Rail Finance Committee, submitted evidence to show that on June 30, 1931, the books of the company showed a cash balance of $3,518,964, whereas in reality the balance was $100,000 or $200,000.

The transportation company is a bus line subsidiary of the railroad.

Wyer agreed Kaplan's figures were correct. He said the fund carried as cash but not actually present as such had been used to purchase securities at the instruction of the late O. P. Van Sweringen, of Cleveland. Van Sweringen's Alleghany Corporation had obtained control of the Missouri Pacific a short time previously.

At the conclusion of the committee's hearings, Wyer, who resides in St. Louis, requested an opportunity to explain the reasons for the stock purchases and the cash reports.

"You have been pretty rough on me," he said, "and have heard only part of this story. I felt I had no option in the matter and that in making these false reports I was acting in the best interest of the company. I had certain instructions, and to comply intelligently I thought I had to do this way."

WASHINGTON: FRIDAY, OCTOBER 22, 1937

Over the Coffee

By Harlan Miller

OF THEE I SING: Of the Washington bigshot who can be heard above the murmur of the cocktail lounge proclaiming: "So I told the President—" . . .

Of the newcomers who vow they will call on everyone from the Siamese Minister to the Secretary of the Smithsonian Institution, and never quite get around to calling on their own Congressman . . .

Of hostesses who order only breasts of chicken when they entertain, but eat hash otherwise.

I was congratulating the Maitre at the Shoreham on the excellent flavor of his oysters the other evening.

"Yes," he said modestly, blushing a little, "We raise them in the swimming pool at the Wardman Park."

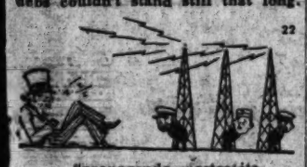
POTOMAC TRIPE: A statesman from the far West suggests that the excess cotton crop be used to upholster park benches . . .

Several fashionable hosts, especially in the diplomatic set, insist audibly on guests with pretty wives, whenever possible . . .

It's a neat touch to play the British and American anthems at the end of a dance, as they do in Bermuda; but here they'd have to play a dozen national anthems. The debs couldn't stand still that long.



—"propaganda wastes its fragrance"

So far there has been only a mild outcry for a football game between the Press and the White House secretariat . . . And why not football as well as baseball?

The White House could muster a team that looks good on paper:

Michelson, quarterback;

McIntyre and J. Roosevelt, halfbacks;

Early, fullback;

John Roosevelt and F. D. Roosevelt, jr., ends;

Corcoran and Cohen, tackles;

The military and naval aides, guards;

Col. Starling, center.

The Scribes' eleven looks even better on paper: Mark Sullivan, quarterback; Pegler and Frank Kent, halfbacks; Paul Mallon, fullback; Dave Lawrence and Raymond Clapper, ends; Arthur Sears Henning and Joe Alsop, tackles; Franklyn Waltman and Turner Catledge, guards; Hugh Johnson, center. Might call on Dorothy Thompson in a pinch. I'd be glad to kick goal every time the scribes made a touchdown.

About a dozen first-rate foreign propaganda programs can be heard on a good shortwave radio set in the Capital every week . . . Three of these come from Rome, three from Berlin, two from Moscow and one from Toyko . . . Of course the English programs are to homey to be called propaganda.

Unfortunately for American enlightenment most of them run into good American orchestras, or tricky reception, or inconvenient hours; nor is the man with a first rate radio set apt to be a pushover for propaganda . . .

At a wild guess, probably none of the programs average a dozen listeners a week in Washington.

"—whispers for the Unknown"

I wonder how many top Washington officials go home for lunch nowadays, as Assistant Secretary of the Navy Franklin Delano Roosevelt used to, in the war days . . .

The tempo of life in the Capital has speeded up so much, even over the war days, that I doubt if anyone of Cabinet or sub-Cabinet rank does unless there happens to be a newlywed in the line-up.

One of the town's strangest phenomena is the awed hush that descends on tourists who go to visit the Tomb of the Unknown Soldier at Arlington . . .

They talk in low whispers as they watch the sentry pace back and forth on the 50-foot strip of matting . . . Occasionally a child's shrill question breaks the stillness.

One fat lady, in deep admiration of the sentry's snappy about-face at the end of his beat, exclaimed audibly, "There's military precision for you!" and several people looked daggers at her . . .

Now and again you can see a forlyish war veteran get a bit choked up or even moist-eyed as he reads the inscription "Known Only to God," or leans over the glass cases of metal wreaths for "le soldat inconnu."

As you walk away you notice that there's still plenty of room for more soldiers' graves, known or unknown, at Arlington.

Fathers Desert Homes to Get Families Relief

Instances of fathers deserting families so that their wives and children would receive relief have come to the attention of the District public assistance division, Public Welfare Diretcor Elwood Street disclosed yesterday in the third annual report of the division.

"The restriction on funds, both for relief and for staff, has put a premium on being unable to work," Street said.

"The mental strain of no work plus no relief has caused nervous breakdowns and ill health, which has increased the number of unemployable families."

Although 1,300 aged persons have been transferred from relief old-age assistance, Street reported, the number of unemployables receiving relief July 1, 1936, was 3,402 and a year later 3,313, or only 189 less than a year ago.

Street said that substantial progress had been made in the past year in promoting the social security program. More than 80 per cent of the applications for old-age pensions have been approved.

The report discloses that 48 per cent of those granted old-age pensions were receiving relief prior to their transfer. Twenty-one per cent were born in the District and 42 per cent in Maryland or Virginia. Only 6 per cent are foreign born.

"Two very serious problems were outstanding in the administration of general relief," Street said. "The first was the inadequacy of relief funds throughout the year. The appropriation failed to meet fully the needs of the community. The other problem was that of inadequate staff."

Male Dog Licenses Too Numerous So Study Is Started

Montgomery County police yesterday showed a sudden interest in the ratio of male dogs to females, a subject usually of interest to dog fanciers or researchers in the science of eugenics.

They wondered why the records of dog licenses seemed to show a preponderance of male dogs in the county beyond their occurrence in puppy litters and the preference of dog fanciers. They suspected, though they could not know, that the existence of $1 license fees for males as against a $2 fee for females had something to do with the phenomena.

Heading the investigation was Detective Sergt. Theodore Vollten, with Detective Corpl. John Berry and Patrolman Ernest Thompson especially assigned to assist him, while a group of county auditors continued a check of accounts with orders to report directly to State Attorney James H. Pugh.

Boasting Murder, 2 Bandits Hold Up Attorney at Home

Boasting that police already were looking for them and that "a couple of more murders wouldn't make any difference," two suave young men last night held up W. B. Wooden, lawyer for the Federal Trade Commission; his wife and son at their home in Calvert Hills, Md., and robbed them of $18 in cash and expensive jewelry.

The gentlemen bandits then drove away in Wooden's car, after assuring their victims the automobile would be found abandoned in Washington.

According to police, the family was returning home after visiting a friend. Mrs. Wooden and her son, Eugene, 24, entered the house and started upstairs, where they were met by the two men, both armed. When the elder Wooden entered, the bandits forced the family into a back room, cut the telephone line and fled.

Two Boys, 15, Fight It Out For District's Checker Title

With much knitting of brows, biting of lips and heavy cogitation all around, two 15-year-olders battled at the Central High School last night for championship in the first checker tournament held under the auspices of the Community Center.

After nearly an hour, Stewart Poland, 2606 University place northwest, of the Langley School Boys Club, came from behind to win. He had a solitary king and a single uncrowned piece, whereas his opponent and clubmate, Paul Fuoco, 1356 Girard street northwest, had a pair of kings. But at length young Fuoco moved into a trap and was vanquished.

Another tight and brilliant finish in the 12-to-14-year class gave the victory to Tom Houston, 14, of 1400 Fairmont street, playing for the Powell Club, over Richard Bowler, 332 Seaton street northwest, playing for Langley. In an unlimited class honors went to Lynn Cross, of the Jefferson Boys Club.

Twenty-five boys from five school clubs took part in last night's finals. The youngest was Jack Mack, 9, 67 S street northwest, of the Langley Club, who was eliminated early in the play.

The club leaders present were surprised and gratified to note how advanced much of the playing was, how seriously the game was taken by the players, and how recondite were many of the moves employed.

The tournament was organized by Harry C. English, director of boys' club activities for the Community Center, on the theory that boys are as apt to relish games that made them think as much as games requiring muscle and wind. There was little difficulty in getting interest aroused after the word had gone about as to how beneficial checker playing had been to the batting and fielding averages of the Washington Senators.

According to legend it was Wes Ferrell who, toward the end of the season, converted the Senators practically en masse to the intellectual pastime of checkers. Plans are said to be afoot to persuade some of the Senators to participate in an all-age checker tournament under the auspices of the Community Center.

Grape Kept As Chief of Civic Group

Privilege Tax Action Withheld, But Complaints Are Voiced.

Theodore S. Grape was unanimously re-elected president of the Federation of Businessmen's Associations at a meeting in the Hotel Hamilton last night, dominated by vigorous discussion of the business privilege tax.

Indorsing the recommendation of a special committee that no action be taken on the tax while it is pending in the courts, the delegates nevertheless heard lively objection to the impost expressed by Louis I. Obergh, one of the members of the committee.

Tax Is Condemned.

The association unanimously approved a resolution of a committee headed by J. Nelson Anderson that appointive members of the District government should not be eligible unless they had resided in the District five years previous to appointment and had claimed no other residence. Employes under civil service are not included in the proposal.

"The business privilege tax law is confiscatory, discriminatory, abusive and unconstitutional throughout," Obergh stated. "Now they tax us for the privilege of doing business—tomorrow they're going to tax us for the air we breathe."

Fairfax Oyster, newly elected first vice president of the association, asserted that although he had submitted to the $10 license free, "I do not intend to pay any tax bills rendered me based on gross sales." He advocated what he called a "sit-down strike" on the tax authorities.

Sales Tax Favored.

Grape pointed out that "this association and, I think, every individual member association has gone on record in favor of a sales tax."

In his presidential report covering 1936-37, Grape said he had assurance that the 1939 District budget will permit some amelioration of the traffic problem, notably in the construction of a K street viaduct to Georgetown.

In addition to Grape and Oyster, the following officers were elected: Second vice president, George Ford; third vice president, Archer Haycock; secretary, Milton R. Vollmer, and treasurer, T. E. Norris.

Delegates for 1937-38 from each of the ten member associations were named as follows: Central, T. S. Grape and Hugh Keiser; Northeast, Louis Bowdler and L. I. Obergh; Southeast, Louis F. Frick and Arthur Schaffer; Georgetown, Archer Haycock and John Paul Jones; Cleveland Park, E. G. Snyder and T. E. Norris; Columbia Heights, George A. Ford and H. C. Phillips; Georgia avenue, Oscar Felker and M. R. Vollmer; Connecticut avenue, B. Houston McCeney and Harry Kronheimer; Brookland Woodridge, John Fowler and F. M. McLaughlin, and New Center Market, Fairfax Oyster and F. W. Loetsch.

Tax Repeal Asked.

Demanding repeal of the business privilege tax at the next session of Congress and refund of all money paid in under its provisions, the Lido Civic Club last night joined dozens of organizations which have already protested the law.

The provision for refund of taxes already paid occasioned the only debate on the resolution, which termed the tax "unjust and confiscatory."

The Lido organizatoin also adopted a resolution commending The Post for its series of articles, "Working for Washington."

Seventy-five dollars was pledged by members for erection of the proposed Marconi monument in Washington. The club voted $25 for the school children's free-lunch fund.

Spirited discussion of the merits of ravioli featured a debate on the menu for the club's "ladies' night" at the Mayflower next Thursday. Affirmative and negative appeared to command equal volume when inclusion of the debated dish was put to an oral vote, but Dr. DeMino, a member of the proravioli faction, ruled "the ayes have it."

4 Plays Picked As Finalists in DramaTourney

Finalists in the Community Center one-act play tournament were selected last night after presentation of the concluding round of preliminaries in Roosevelt High School. They were:

The Federal Bureau of Investigation for its "100th Trick," directed by Milton Freedman; the Troupers of East Washington, "The Weak Spot," directed by Arthur Rhodes; the Arts Club, "Shanghai," Marie E. Walcott, and the Buchanan Parent-Teacher Association, "Poor Henry," Dorothy Winthrop.

Awards for the best individual performances were announced by Caleb O'Connor, one of the preliminary judges, as follows: The Maud Howell Smith award for the most outstanding work, Carolyn Rogers for her performance in the "Weal Spot," and Alfred Francfort of the FBI group, a double season membership awarded by the Civic Theater.

Plays presented last night included "Soldadera," by Josephine Niggli, performed by the Players of the American Association of University Women and directed by Mary Vaccaro, and "The Bride," by Gertrude Jennings and enacted by the Wesley Heights Players, directed by Gertrude Jennings.

Drama critics of the five Washington daily newspapers will be judges of the finals tomorrow night. Prizes of $50 for the winners, $25 to the second place group and consolation awards of $12.50 each were donated by the Daily News, the Star, Herald, Times and Post.

Bandit Declines Check Offered by D. C. Grocer

A holdup man who wouldn't accept a check took $5 in ready cash last night from Abraham Resnick, proprietor of a grocery store at 330 D street southeast.

Resnick protested when the man, holding his hand in his coat pocket as if to hide a gun, demanded all the change from the register. "I'll write you a check," he said. The bandit decided that he'd rather have the ready money.

Alexandria Mayor Presented Highest U. S. Rose Award

Award of the Nicholson Bowl to Richard L. Ruffner, mayor of Alexandria, featured last night's meeting of the Potomac Rose Society. The silver trophy is the highest prize open to an American rose-grower. Mayor Ruffner also received the Dumbarton Oaks cup.

Other exhibitors at the society's recent show, honored last night include Mrs. Lomax Tayloe, of Vienna, Va., who won the Washington Florists Club cup and Mrs. Whitman Cross, of Chevy Chase, Md., recipient of a vase donated by the Trowel Club.

J. W. Wellington, president of the Takoma Horticultural Club, received the Star vase in behalf of his club which earned the greatest number of points at the show.

The prizes were distributed by W. H. Youngman, chairman of the society's committee on awards.

Traffic Head Cites Co-operation Lack

Efforts to relieve downtown traffic congestion will fail unless Government departments agree "100 per cent" to co-operate in a plan to stagger the working hours of employes, Traffic Director William A. Van Duzer declared yesterday.

He cited refusal of the Interior Department to change working hours and pointed out that only one out of nine agencies solicited has agreed to co-operate.

"We have the same problem with traffic congestion that an engineer has in trying to fill a reservoir with water using a 2-inch pipe. The 2-inch pipe might fill the reservoir in an hour, but two pipes would do the work more quickly," Van Duzer said.

The traffic director, however, said he would continue efforts to change the hours of all Federal workers who now report to work at 9 a. m.

4-Point Drive On Juvenile Crime Asked

Civic Heads Start Move to Curb Lawless Tendencies.

By Howard F. Wentworth.

A crime prevention movement designed to curb lawless tendencies among Washington's youth was inaugurated yesterday at a meeting of civic, official and social service leaders.

Supported by the Washington Criminal Justice Association and sponsored by the Junior Board of Commerce, efforts will be made to seek enlargement of the Police Department's juvenile relations squad—now composed of one policeman who handles approximately 4,000 cases annually.

First steps toward a comprehensive crime reduction program were taken at yesterday's annual meeting of the Bureau of Rehabilitation in Wesley Hall, 1703 K street northwest. Thomas A. Meryweather, executive director of the Philadelphia Crime Prevention Association, outlined benefits of the movement in his city and urged Washington to adopt similar activities.

In Philadelphia, prior to formation of the crime prevention association, Meryweather said, an estimated 10,000 boys and young men were arrested each year on criminal charges. Last year, with the organization directing a co-ordinated crime-prevention drive, the number dropped to 6,500, he added

4-Point Drive Asked.

A four-point program for the District has been suggested:

1. Enlargement of the present juvenile relations squad into a Crime Prevention Bureau or Boys Service Unit with at least three officers and adequate clerical staff.

2. That such a unit have jurisdiction over all cases involving boys under 17.

3. That establishment of such a unit be made with a view of enlarging it to give 24-hour service in all matters of crime affecting boys under 17.

4. That the Police Department as a whole co-operate with this unit by bringing to its attention boys in the age group who are in danger of delinquency, so that the unit may minimize these dangers by consultation with parents, by referrals to boys' clubs or to a proposed "big brother" committee of the Junior Board of Commerce.

Crime, Disease Likened.

The problem of crime control, Meryweather told the meeting, is primarily a problem of youth. There is no one cure for crime, he declared, and criminal tendencies should be treated like diseases fit remedies to the symptoms.

"There is an increasing need for a co-ordinating council of community leaders to combat local crime conditions," Meryweather said. "In Philadelphia, this council is a private enterprise, working hand in hand with police and social workers to curb juvenile delinquency and stop crimes before they occur."

If Washington or any other jurisdiction is to lower its prison population, Meryweather pointed out, it must deal first with youth, guiding wayward footsteps away from criminal temptations.

He lauded Maj. Ernest W. Brown's boys club program, citing such a movement as an important step toward educating boys and young men in the futility of crime and establishing the "cop" as a friend and not a foe.

A petition has been sent to Maj. Brown urging establishment of an augmented crime-prevention squad and he has been assured the support of civic and business leaders in any move he undertakes.

Nelson B. Bell About The Showshops

Midwest Filmgoers Reveal Surprising Preferences As to the Nature of Their Screen Entertainment

A Total of 57,599 Theater Patrons Express Choices as to Stars, Types of Programs and Vaudeville; 'Zola' Moves to Metropolitan; 'Victoria the Great' Coming to Keith's in November; Midnight Shows at the Gayety; Notes of the Theater World.

A CLOSE analysis of the interesting results of a recent poll that is believed to represent a typical cross-section of American taste in the matter of motion picture entertainment has just arrived at the drama desk and has been examined with some minuteness.

BELL.

The poll was a joint enterprise conducted by the St. Louis Times-Star and the Fanchon and Marco theaters in and around the Missouri metropolis. Approximately 310,000 questionnaires were distributed to bona fide theater patrons of four centrally located first-run houses and 27 neighborhood theaters during the ten-day period between September 17 and 26, just passed. Of this number, 57,599 were filled out and returned.

This is deemed a sufficient number to indicate characteristic preferences among a wide range of picturegoers remote from the influence of the Eastern seaboard. The balloting embraced the theatergoers of a city of some 875,000 population, with an additional potential audience of about 500,000 within a radius of less than a mile. This populace is one of independent view and the largest key city community between Chicago, to the northeast, and Kansas City in the opposite direction—a solid block of what may be termed "typical Americans."

The vote of these cinema enthusiasts determined their selections of favorite actors and actresses; their preference as between single-feature and double-feature programs and their choice in the matter of stage entertainment.

The ten leading actors polled 51.5 per cent of the total questionnaires. They were, in the order named, Clark Gable, Robert Taylor, William Powell, Paul Muni, Spencer Tracy, Tyrone Power, Dick Powell, Gary Cooper, Errol Flynn and Fredric March. They were closely followed by Wallace Beery, Ronald Colman, Warner Baxter, Nelson Eddy, Don Ameche, Joe E. Brown, Gene Raymond, John Boles, James Cagney and Fred MacMurray, also in that order.

Among the feminine stars, the favorite ten were Myrna Loy, Loretta Young, Claudette Colbert, Ginger Rogers, Alice Faye, Kay Francis, Barbara Stanwyck, Joan Crawford, Jeanette MacDonald and Janet Gaynor. Their closest competitors were Bette Davis, Norma Shearer, Sonja Henie, Irene Dunne, Jean Arthur, Luise Rainer, Ann Sothern, Greta Garbo, Carole Lombard, Martha Raye, Joan Blondell and Mae West.

In both classifications, listings were made of players named on less than 1 per cent of the total questionnaires. Many of these ratings seem little less than grotesque to those accustomed to Washington's appraisals, not to mention New York's. For instance, among the scores receiving only one vote each appear such names as Lionel Atwill, Lynn Overman, Eugene Pallette, C. Aubrey Smith, Conrad Veidt, Fred Waring, Robert Warwick, Katherine Alexander, Judith Allen, Mona Barrie, Grace Bradley, Claire Dodd, Pola Negri, Wini Shaw, Estelle Taylor and Diana Wynyard. The rest of your prime favorites ranged up to between 500 and 600 votes, with the winners running well up in the thousands.

The preponderance of this test ballot, furthermore, expressed a majority preference for double-feature bills, as opposed to single features with short-reel supplementaries, and for noted bands on the stage, as among prominent bands, singers, dancers and other vaudeville specialists. The vote was heavily on the side of stage shows as against straight picture programs.

Shirley Temple, of course, led all the rest of the juvenile stars by a mile, with Jane Withers, Freddie Bartholomew, Deanna Durbin, Mickey Rooney and five more trailing in the order named.

The reliability of the poll is evidenced by the fact that the winning adult star in both male and female brackets appears in Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer pictures, whereas the Fanchon and Marco theaters in and around St. Louis do not run M-G-M product and Fanchon and Marco were co-sponsors of the voting with the newspaper that tabulated the returns.

I trust this break-down of the figures will not reach the eyes of the gentlemen who determine the film actors' salaries. It may be a tough break for some of them if it does!

"The Life of Emile Zola," with Paul Muni in one of his most impressive and lauded stellar roles, begins a special repeat engagement on the screen at the Warner Brothers' Metropolitan Theater today, following its eminently successful week at the Earle and "day and date" bookings at the Ambassador, which continue through today. If Paul Muni were not star of "Zola" by every right of superior achievement, Joseph Schildkraut would be for the superlative excellence of his performance in the vital role of Capt. Dreyfus.

That article in the November issue of Scribner's Magazine by Milton MacKaye on "The Birth of a Nation," to which reference was made here yesterday, proves to be a recapitulation of many of David Wark Griffith's difficulties in getting his epochal production before the public, principally because of lack of finances and the industry's reluctance to participate in the risk of fostering a 12-reel film to be shown at $2 prices in a day when the average motion picture tariff was a dime. Their perspicacity was slightly jolted by "Birth's" subsequent record of $18,000,000 gross receipts.

It would be interesting to this observation post if it could remember accurately how many times it saw "The Birth." The first time was in the ballroom of the Raleigh Hotel, before the picture's public release, at a private preview showing primarily in compliment to members of the President's Cabinet and the Justices of the United States Supreme Court. During its later run at the National, we ducked out only occasionally for a cup of coffee and a sandwich.

Mr. MacKaye is guilty of few inaccuracies in his recital of what became of all the members of that exceptional Griffith cast. Wallace Reid, Henry B. Walthall and one or two others have taken their last curtains; Miriam Cooper married Director Raoul Walsh, Mae Marsh lives on the West Coast with two grown children, but George Seigman, I believe, no longer plays small parts in pictures. It is my impression that George Seigman also was called to his father many years ago.

It is now pretty definitely fixed that "Victoria the Great" hailed as one of the greatest pictures ever made in England, will follow Joe E. That would make "Victoria" the booking for the week of November 5. At that time, it is planned to have

The dramatic theme of international secret service work in times of war is effectively revived in "Lancer Spy," the film play opening on the screen at Loew's Capitol Theater today. Above are pictured George Sanders, in the title role, and Virginia Field—although Mr. Sanders will hardly be recognized in the latter disguise which he assumes for purposes of deluding the enemy.

Signs of the Times.

That Midwest theater manager must have had his eye on the stock market slump when he announced this double bill on his illuminated marquee:

"BANK ALARM"
"THE LEAGUE OF FRIGHTENED MEN."

Character Men In Demand for Current Films

Character actors reached a new high in importance when it was revealed recently that virtually every one of prominence was either at work in front of the cameras or scheduled to be called within the next few days.

One of them, Fritz Feld, has been so much in demand that he has been rushing from studio to studio, appearing in seven different pictures, all of them about to be released.

Others, like Akim Tamiroff, benefiting by the current vogue for character actors, find their roles enlarged after they start pictures, and hence work weeks longer in single productions than originally intended.

All studios without exception are taking advantage of the versatile talents of the character men. Basil Rathbone has been supporting Claudette Colbert and Charles Boyer at Warner Brothers. On the same lot Claude Rains is lending a sardonic note to the Michael Curtiz film.

Lewis Stone has been busy at Metro in "The Bad Man of Brimstone." Lionel Stander is working on an adjoining stage with Edward G. Robinson. Brian Donlevy found little time for rest on the "In Old Chicago" set.

The case of Tamiroff is typical of what is happening to many character actors. A few weeks ago he was summoned for "The Buccaneer" by Cecil B. DeMille, to do scenes with another character actor, Walter Brennan, masterful portrayer of the cud-chewing, home-grown American. DeMille was so impressed with their work that he had their parts much enlarged, and they are still at it.

Feld is now appearing with Gladys Swarthout and John Boles in "The Yellow Nightingale," at Paramount.

Bob Burns, heretofore a comic, has been drafted for a character part in the Frank Lloyd production, "Wells Fargo." His work is such that predictions are already made that he will do many character roles in the future.

Luis Alberni has been signed by Ernest Lubitsch to appear with Miss Colbert and Gary Cooper in "Bluebeard's Eighth Wife," and Barry Fitzgerald, the Irish actor, has been hard at work in Paramount's "Ebb Tide," the Robert Louis Stevenson story, in Technicolor.

Beery Has Glass Nose on Airship

Leave it to Wallace Beery to find unusual safety devices for his airplane. The latest addition is a glass nose.

"It will house the plane antenna in a transparent, radio-conductible prow, thereby avoiding interference by snow, rain and sleet static," Beery explained to Virginia Bruce, between scenes of "Bad Man of Brimstone."

"The glass nose will also increase the plane's speed from two to five miles an hour."

Beery's two-passenger monoplane now contains every safety gadget he has been able to lay hands on.

"It's got to be safe," he said forcefully. "I often take Carol Ann for sky rides, and—well, I'd die if anything happened to her."

Real Flowers Now For Use in Film

None but genuine flowers will be used in Twentieth Century-Fox productions from now on.

The order came through when executives viewed the first day's rushes of Claire Trevor's picture, "Big Town Girl."

She opened the box, drew forth the beautiful blossoms and smiled in appreciation as she inhaled their fragrance.

Everything was all right except that the flowers rustled.

Splendid Cast Gives "Zenda" New Treatment

Anthony Hope Romance Is Revived in Glittering Spectacle at Palace.

By Nelson B. Bell.

"THE PRISONER OF ZENDA." David O. Selznick's picturization for United Artists of the novel by Anthony Hope and stage play by Edward Rose, adapted to the screen by John L. Balderston, starring Ronald Colman, with Madeleine Carroll, Douglas Fairbanks, jr., Mary Astor, C. Aubrey Smith, Raymond Massey, David Niven, Lawrence G. Grant, Ian Maclaren, Montagu Love, Alexander D'Arcy, Ben Webster, Evelyn Beresford and others. Directed by John Cromwell. Previewed Tuesday, October 19. At Loew's Palace Theater.

A superior cast, thoughtful direction and a succession of settings seldom equaled in magnitude and magnificence remove David O. Selznick's new picturization of Anthony Hope's "The Prisoner of Zenda" from the category of swashbuckling melodramas and place it among the most impressive of the screen's colorful romances.

There are, of course, intervals of tempestuous and thrilling action, spirite ddueling and the ominous connivings of court intrigue, but, in the large view, "Zenda," as it was presented for the first time yesterday on the screen at Loew's Palace Theater, one day in advance of the usual opening, is a rationalized play in which characterization and what may be denominated "psychological drama" never are subordinated to mere spectacular display.

It is perhaps the spectacular display, however, that will leave the most vivid impression on the mass mind, for here are unfolded some of the most gorgeous scenes that ever have been reflected upon a silver sheet. This is indexed as early as the fanfare of trumpets that precedes the main title and screen credits that anticipate the pictured action. Then, scattered among the less glittering periods of the play are such far-flung and majestic panoramas as the coronation scene, the state ball and the endless vistas of the royal palace.

A Mammoth Dungeon Keep.

The dungeon backgrounds for the famous duelling scene between Rudolph Rassendyll, the masquerading Englishman, and Rupert of Hentzau, the arch-conspirator, are in a contrasting and appropriately somber and ominous mood that still maintains the picture's claim to complete and punctilious insistence on painting an expansive and vigorous canvas.

But it is the cast to which chief credit for the revivification of this favorite old romance is due. Led by Ronald Colman, one of the cinema's finest and most repressed actors, the principals establish and sustain a uniform and high level of excellence. Mr. Colman, as goes without saying, appears in the dual role of King Rudolph V, the wine-sodden betrothed of the Princess Flavia, and Rudolph Rassendyll, the British adventurer, who assumes the royal place and prerogatives to sae the throne from the sinister clutches of "Black Michael" and his treacherous henchmen, Rupert of Hentzau, a young profligate not averse to murder and pillage to achieve his predatory ends. Mr. Colman fortunately bears an amazing resemblance to himself and, with the aid of a sparse beard as Rassendyll, contrives to make his scenes with himself marvels of realistic double-exposure photography. The romantic intervals played with Madeleine Carroll, as Flavia, are done in close-up without attempt to attain flamboyant effects, beyond those of superlative camera work to emphasize the notable blonde beauty of one of the screen's most competent actresses. Miss Carroll, it seems to me, is a perfect foil for Mr. Colman's restrained methods of character delineation.

Support Is Brilliant.

As the hard-bitten Col. Zapt, C. Aubrey Smith is his usual rugged self in the defense of his king and country and on the side of the play's villainous enterprises are Raymond Massey, distinguished English actor, as Black Michael, and Douglas Fairbanks, jr., as Rupert. The junior Fairbanks is as ideally cast as the others, in his pivotal assignment. In lesser roles, but still of prime importance, are Mary Astor, the discarded Antoinette de Mauban, and David Niven, as Fritz von Tarlenheim.

John Cromwell's diection is nicely gauged and the photography unfailingly records the vast beauty of the film's opulent investiture.

A unique companion attraction on the Palace's new bill is Pete Smith's short-reel analysis of "The Romance of Radium," a genuinely authoritative and distinguished study of the wonders of a substance that is both curative and deadly. The filming of this subject was a matter of pioneering that consumed a year of painstaking effort.

Brief added subjects and a new issue of the pictured "Events of the Day" further augment a major feature of impeccable dramatic and visual quality.

Little Gal Traps Heap Big Injun

A strong comedy note is struck in the Ritz Brothers' first starring vehicle, "Life Begins at College," by Joan Davis' persistent pursuit of Nat Pendleton, the rich Redskin from the Oklahoma oil country, who likes football better than femmes. They are pictured herewith in th hilarious musical farce, opening on the screen at Loew's Columbia Theater today for a repeat F street engagement.

Run of Bad Luck Ended for Player

Kitty Kelly's return to the screen in "Blossoms on Broadway" was her first following a Hollywood series of misfortunes, she said today.

Her rapid climb to cinematic recognition came in such pictures as "Too Much Harmony," "All of Me," and "The Farmer Takes a Wife." Then came severe attacks of bronchitis which sent her into the desert for months, and a brain concussion, which laid her up for more months.

Her role in "Blossoms on Broadway" was her first in a Hollywood production since "The Farmer Takes a Wife," released more than a year and a half ago.

Davidson Tried To Knife Killer, Police Are Told

Marine Officials Hold Youth Tracked Down by Sergt. McDermott.

of the same caliber was discovered in a boot owned by Ross, in his quarters at Quantico, McDermott reported. The weapon and shell were brought to Washington for a ballistics comparison with the slug taken from Davidson's head.

Ross' reputed confession came after five hours of questioning. Although no charges have been placed against him, McDermott declared that "everything he has said thus far checks perfectly."

The night of the murder, investigators said, Ross was on authorized leave from the Marine base. He returned to Quantico when the leave expired and was never A.W.O.L. His activities upon returning to duty, Quantico officers reported, revealed no indications that he had even read of the crime.

Credit for the arrest and reported confession was given directly to McDermott. Starting without a tangible clue, he tracked down the suspect in record time.

Driver's Name Withheld.

Although the suspected murderer had been seen by three persons a few moments after the crime, when he wrecked Davidson's car near Triangle, his trail beyond that point remained hidden for two weeks.

The three men saw the suspect climb into a car with Pennsylvania license plates, headed toward Washington. They could not furnish an accurate description of the man, or the license number of the car.

Last Sunday the driver of the car, who requested that his name be withheld, stopped at a roadstand near Stafford Courthouse, Va.

He asked about Davidson's car, the Chrysler he had seen wrecked two weeks before. He told of picking up its driver, the suspected murderer, and taking him to Frederick, Md.

This chance conversation was the break police had been waiting for. The owner of the roadstand learned the license number of the Pennsylvania car and gave it to police.

Through it they were able to contact the man who had unknowingly aided the murderer's escape. He furnished new details of the suspect's description, and stated that the suspect had planned to take a bus from Frederick to Baltimore.

Suspect Nervous.

The search turned to Frederick where police on Tuesday talked with a bus driver who had seen the suspect, nervous and with the right knee of his trousers torn, enter the Frederick Bus Terminal shortly before 2 a. m. the morning after the crime.

The bus driver told police the suspect was in a hurry to reach Baltimore. Apparently dazed with nervous fatigue, the suspect stared at the bus driver "for several minutes" when he learned that the first bus for Baltimore left at 2:25.

The suspect decided to try hitch-hiking, and a few minutes later obtained a ride—with two men in a big automobile bearing Maryland tags. The car drove to the intersection of routes 240 and 15. There instead of taking the direct route to Baltimore the car turned north toward the Liberty Heights road.

Beyond this point the trail of the excaping murderer was again lost. The bus driver was unable to furnish the license number of the Chrysler.

Victim, Suspect Linked.

With the information he had obtained in Frederick, Sergt. McDermott checked back to the earlier stages of the investigation, during which he had uncovered the following clues.

1. The first description of the suspected murderer had been that he was a short man.

2. The angle at which the rear vision mirror of Davidson's damaged car had been set confirmed the theory that its last driver was short.

3. Davidson was found to be in the habit of visiting Quantico. On the night of September 26, a week before his death, he entered the Marine Base at 10:25 p. m. and left at 10:40 p. m. On the same night Ross reported into the base at 10:30 p. m. No one else reported in within half an hour of this time.

From the time these facts were uncovered, Ross was kept under watch, Sergt. McDermott said last night.

Sergt. McDermott waited for the details that would complete the case. He found them in Frederick.

A few hours later, according to McDermott, Ross said, "I was expecting you, Sergeant. I have been expecting you since I learned you had traced me to Baltimore."

Sergt. McDermott said Ross told him his route from the time two men gave him a ride in their Chrysler out of Frederick. He rode with them to Overlea, on the Belair road. Ross said the men would be able to identify him. They had seen him clearly under the headlights as he helped them push the car out of a ditch after it skidded from the road.

Helped Truck Driver.

From Overlea he rode on a truck to Aberdeen. During the ride he helped the driver unload goods several times. The truck driver would also be able to identify him, McDermott quoted Ross as saying.

Davidson, 52-year-old bachelor, left his home at 555 Randolph street northwest about 8:30 p. m. the night he was slain. Accustomed to riding alone at night before retiring, Davidson failed to tell his sister, Mrs. Laura Dow, with whom he lived, where he was going.

McDermott did not reveal details of the "argument" described by Ross. When found by a passerby along Widewater road on the morning of October 4, Davidson was lying on his back beneath a tree. He had been shot through the forehead and stabbed under the heart.

In his haste to leave the scene, the slayer took Davidson's car and headed toward Washington. He failed, however, to make a sharp turn in the road and crashed into a sign post.

Flags Passing Car.

The machine was wrecked. Attendants at a nearby filling station hurried to the accident spot and offered the driver aid. Their offers were refused, howeer, and the driver flagged a passing car and continued on his way. It was the driver of this car, bearing Pennsylvania license plates, whom McDermott located. Descriptions furnished by those who saw the accident and by the Pennsylvania driver, McDermott reported, fit the suspected prisoner.

Ross is attached to Brown Field, marine aviation headquarters, and Marine aviation headquarters, and He has been stationed at Quantico for about eight months.

McDermott said Ross would be held by authorities at Quantico until permission is obtained from the Secretary of the Navy to turn him over to civil authorities.

Against the possibility that Ross managed to obtain dishonorable discharge and release from the Marines, McDermott has a blanket warrant under which Ross could be arrested as a civilian.

The warrant McDermott expects to use in making the arrest will be obtained after consultation with Commonwealth's Attorney Wallis. The case will be presented to the grand jury November 8.

McDermott said the confession he obtained was not signed.

McDermott said he had made no effort to obtain a signed confession, since there remain several points in Ross' story he wants to check.

Attempts of Ross to establish an alibi have already broken down, McDermott said.

The youth's father, Walter J. Ross, farmer near Aberdeen, claimed yesterday that his son had been at home from the Sunday of the murder through the following Tuesday.

Sergt. McDermott has been a member of the Virginia State police for 12 years. After five years as a patrolman he was promoted to his present rank, in charge of the area covered by Arlington, Fairfax, Prince William, Stafford and Loudoun Counties, and the city of Alexandria.

A native of Alexandria, he was chief of the Alexandria Fire Department from 1920 to 1923. For the next two years he operated a fleet of taxicabs and rented cars until he entered the State police. His home is near Mount Vernon, Va.

In Hollywood

With JIMMY FIDLER

Hollywood, Oct. 21.—With at least three pictorial magazines making capital of candid camera shots of movie stars caught in undignified and often ludicrous poses, Hollywood has a new worry. And most of the stars are taking a sudden and very militant interest in every publicity picture sent out by their respective studios.

MYRNA LOY.

For years a few smart players—Mae West, Claudette Colbert, Carole Lombard, Marlene Dietrich, Clark Gable, Myrna Loy—have insisted upon their right to censor every "still" picture in which they appear. Now, with the "candid" craze reaching an all-time high, just about every well-known player wants the same privilege. The studios are on the spot—on the one hand they do not care to offend the powerful pictorial magazines; on the other they do not want their stars pictured unflatteringly. Several of the majors have banned outside picture takers, hired well-known candid cameramen, and assigned them the job of "shooting" their stars in informal poses. By so doing they can retain the right to censor the most objectionable pictures and protect their contract stars.

IT IS EASY to understand Hollywood's apprehension if ever someone has made a catch-as-catch-can snapshot of you. The studios spend untold thousands building up a beautiful girl—and one candid camera shot, published in a widely read magazine, can undo the whole publicity campaign. Hollywood's human commodities are exceedingly rare, exceedingly valuable—and exceedingly fragile.

If there is any one thing that irks me more than another, it is for someone to be habitually late for appointments—that is, unless the someone is Ginger Rogers. Ginger has never been known to keep any appointment on the dot. Frequently she is an hour or more late—but when she arrives, she invariably is so apologetic and so flustered that the waiter's wrath dissipates like a morning mist. Ginger is late because she has so many interests that time, as a mechanical matter of hours, minutes, and seconds, never enters into her calculations. I wonder if she knows that the girl who makes appointments for her interviews always makes provision for her tardiness. If the interviewer is told to be there at noon, Ginger is told to be on hand at 11. Thanks to the ruse, members of the press seldom wait more than half an hour for her.

Met a businessman today who owns a factory in Long Beach, but has a Hollywood address on his letterhead. "It pays cash dividends," he explained, "because everyone in the world has a romantic interest in that name, Hollywood." And I got to thinking how odd that is, for as a matter of fact, there is no Hollywood. The name is given, vaguely, to the northwestern section of Los Angeles, and the district has no exact boundaries and no railroad stations. You cannot find it on any official map. And most of the movie studios that have made the name famous are no longer in "Hollywood." I asked the businessman to define "Hollywood" and, after fumbling for a moment, he said, "Well, it's wherever the movies are made." At the moment, he is taking in quite a territory—movie location units are working in Alaska, Indo-China, Louisiana, Washington and Mexico City.

After years of fending off high-powered salesmen, Clark Gable has developed super-sales resistance, but a kid magazine peddler stumped him yesterday. The youngster stopped him at the studio gate and asked: "Do you like race horses, Mr. Gable?" Clark admitted that he does. "You even own one, don't you?" the boy persisted. Gable again had to say yes. "Well," concluded the master psychologist, "you ought to be interested in this magazine—it has a beautiful picture of a horse on the cover!" Clark bought.

IckesTellsDuke To Arrange for Own Publicity

Curt Cablegram Reveals Apparent Government Coolness to Visit.

A collect cablegram from Secretary Ickes to the personal agent of the Duke of Windsor gave observers here yesterday the first glimpse of what actually may be the attitude of the Government toward the former British monarch's visit to America.

It is, the observers decided, definitely cool. For not only will the duke have to pay the message, but its wording was brief and to the point, in effect:

"Work out your own itinerary of American housing projects and attendant publicity."

Text Not Given Out.

Secretary Ickes declined to disclose the text of the cable, but admitted its brevity, his personal signature and his refusal to prepare publicity and a route of projects for the royal visitor and his American wife to inspect.

"He'll have to work out his own program and handle his own publicity," the Secretary said. "I understand the duke is coming to America incognito. I don't want to do anything to disturb his anonymity." Then Ickes laughed:

"Since he wanted the information collect, I sent it."

Thus came the widespread intrepretation of the Government's attitude toward the visit as cool, or, certainly, as meaning the Government has withdrawn from all connection with the trip.

In Berlin, Charles Bedaux, American friend and personal agent of the Duke, the United Press reported, was making arrangements for a transcontinental tour of America that will be the most extensive trip abroad ever made by a member of Britain's immediate royal family. It appeared, the United Press said, that the stay of the Duke and Duchess may last three or four months instead of the month or six weeks originally planned.

Postlude

By Ray C. B. Brown.

Rossini's perpetually spontaneous comedy, "The Barber of Seville," as effervescent today as it was the hour after the composer completed it, was given a lively performance last evening by the Columbia Opera Company, with Alfredo Chigi carrying off the honors by the sheer momentum of his zestful impersonation. That does not mean that Luisa Coronina was not a piquant Rosina, Mario Palermo a dashing Almaviva and Philip Waitfield a Basilio in the true tradition. But Figaro is, after all, the pivot of the play, about which both the intrigue of the plot and the vocal pinwheels revolve.

From the moment that Signor Chigi made his vivacious entrance, he caught the favor of the audience, and for some time after he had finished the "Largo al factotum" it seemed as though he would be obliged to repeat it, so prolonged was the applause. He radiated a vitality irrestible in its humor, and there was no diminution of its force for a moment. He was so completely Figaro that he appeared to be a different barytone than the one who sang Tonio on the opening night of the engagement.

All the principals entered into the rollicking fun with an abandon that imparted to the comedy the improvisational quality which it needs. The pace was consistently rapid, and there was no lagging in the lilt of the music. This rapidity is of the essence of the score, which is a tour de force of a master. The story goes that Rossini wrote the "Barber" in thirteen days, having been put on his mettle by a disparaging letter from Paisiello, who already had set Beaumarchais' play. It certainly sounds that way, as though the melodies had sparkled from a white heat of inspiration.

This work of Rossini's proves that speed of writing is no detriment to perfection when the writer has genius. The creative energy does not always act with facility, for we know with what labor Beethoven composed. But Rossini's ease of invention in this case places him in the same category with those ready writers, Bach, Handel (who completed his oratorio "Israel in Egypt" in three weeks), Haydn and Mozart.

Foundry Church Finds Proof Of Lincoln's Aid in War Days

A facsimile of Abraham Lincoln's life membership in the Missionary Society of Foundry Methodist Episcopal Church was exhibited to members of the congregation last night by the pastor, the Rev. Frederick Brown Harris.

It establishes beyond doubt, Dr. Harris explained, that the Great Emancipator was as close to the Foundry Church in the dark days of the War Between the States as he was to any other organization.

Dr. Harris obtained the facsimile of the membership in the society from Cincinnati. He hopes eventually to find the original certificate.

It was in 1861, shortly after the first guns of the Civil War had rumbled at Manassas, that the President and the First Lady rolled to the doors of the church, then located where the Colorado Building now stands.

It was a restless Sunday afternoon in Washington, with carriages clattering here and there through the downtown district, and men in blue uniforms everywhere. Now and then, above the pealing of church bells, there came the rattle of a gun carriage.

Amid stir and bustle, the President and Mrs. Lincoln entered the church.

In the pulpit was Lincoln's close friend, Bishop Matthew Simpson, of the Baltimore Conference. Lincoln always made it a point to attend the Foundry Church when his friend preached.

On that Sunday in 1861, Bishop Simpson's sermon was upon missionary work. At its conclusion he offered the opportunity for those desiring to subscribe $100 to become life members.

First one of the officials suggested that $100 be raised so that the President might be enrolled.

From his pew, Lincoln arose and stretched his long arm toward the bishop.

"This," said he, "is the first time I have ever been put upon the block. Let me pay my money and take me down."

There was a ripple of laughter and this was followed by light applause. Lincoln paid his $100, and became a life member of the Missionary Society of the Methodist Episcopal Church.

Again, in the turbulent war year of 1863, Lincoln and Mrs. Lincoln contributed $150 to the society.

"Mr. Lincoln never actually joined any church," pointed out Dr. Harris.

"But when he became a member of the Missionary Society he came nearer identifying himself with a church than at any other time."

U.S. to Lay Keel Of $60,000,000 Warship Oct. 27

The keel of the new battleship North Carolina will be laid on October 27, Navy Day, Secretary Swanson announced yesterday.

Asserting that advancement of the date by two or three months was "without significance," a Navy Department spokesman declared that the facilities for construction of the North Carolina at the New York yard had become available sooner than had been expected.

The ceremony, which will be attended by Assistant Secretary of the Navy Charles Edison, Gov. Clyde R. Hoey of North Carolina, and other Government officials, will high-light the annual celebration.

Secretary Edison had predicted that actual work on the vessel and her sister ship, the Washington, would begin early next year. Four years will be required to build them.

Bishop Exhorts Missionaries to War Upon Reds

By the Associated Press.

Rome, Oct. 21.—Archbishop Celso Costantini, secretary of the congregation for the propagation of the faith, today called on Catholic missionaries to wage relentless combat against communism and not to limit themselves to prayers and devotions in that struggle.

The archbishop, whose position makes him one of the leaders of the church's far-flung missionary activities, spoke in the Gregorian University before a large audience of cardinals, other prelates and missionaries. His address was published in the Osservatore Romano, semi-official Vatican organ.

Archbishop Costantini declared that "in China, where communism already has shown itself, the good sense of the Chinese people has revolted, and a movement toward conversion to Catholicism is in progress as it never was in the past."

Mrs. Ewing, 91, UnionGeneral's Widow, Is Dead

Funeral Set Tomorrow for Former Belle, Friend of Blaine, Sherman.

Mrs. Charles Ewing, widow of a Union Army general and a belle in Washington society during the decade following the Civil War, died yesterday at her home, 1424 Sixteenth street northwest. She was ninety-one years old.

During the 70's Mrs. Ewing and her husband were prominent figures in the life of the Capital. They numbered among their friends James G. Blaine and Gen. and Mrs. William T. Sherman.

Born at Mount Vernon, Ohio, the daughter of Representative John K. Miller, of Ohio, Mrs. Ewing came to Washington to live in 1870. Her husband, a regular Army officer, who served as inspetcor general of the Fifteenth Army Corps under Gen. Sherman, practiced law here until his death in 1883.

Surviving are three sons, John K. M. Ewing, of Washington; Charles Ewing, of Milton, Mass., and Blaine Ewing, of New York City, and four daughters, Mrs. Virginia Anderson, wife of Rear Admiral W. S. Anderson, of the United States Navy; Mrs. Kathleen Daly, of New Rochelle, N. Y., and Miss Eleanor S. and Mrs. Martha Ewing, both of Washington. She also leaves ten grandchildren.

Funeral services will be held at St. Matthew's Catholic Church tomorrow morning. Burial will be in Arlington Cemetery.

Rites Set Today For Maj. Price

Funeral services for Maj. Louis H. Price, 61, finance department, United States Army, retired, who died Wednesday at Fort Thomas, Ky., will be held at 11:30 a. m. today in the Southern section of Arlington National Cemetery.

Maj. Price was on duty here from December, 1918, until April, 1919, in the office of the chief of finance and then served for three months in the adjutant general's office. He was retired two years ago.

A native of Oakland, Calif., Maj. Price enlisted during the Spanish-American War.

He is survived by his wife, Mrs. Emily H. Price, of San Jose, Calif.

Burial Tomorrow For E. F. McMahon

Funeral services will be held tomorrow for Edward Francis McMahon, for many years sheet-metal-working foreman at the Naval Research Laboratory. He died Wednesday at Georgetown University Hospital after a two-week illness. The funeral will take place from the home of his niece, Mrs. L. E. Thomas, 1524 Newton street northeast. A requiem mass will be offered at 9 a. m. in St. Anthony's Church, Twelfth and Monroe streets northeast. Burial will be in Mount Olivet Cemetery.

Besides his wife, the former Miss Gertrude Harrison, Mr. McMahon leaves a son, William F. McMahon, of 4486 Conduit road northwest; a daughter, Mrs. John Lanning, of Bloomsburg, Pa., and three grandchildren. Two brothers, Joseph P. and William J. McMahon, and two sisters, Mrs. Margaret Tolson and Miss Elizabeth McMahon, all of Washington, also survive.

Adm. Harrington Dies in Yonkers

Rear Admiral Purnell Frederick Harrington, 93, U. S. Navy, retired, who served as an ensign with Admiral Farragut at the Battle of Mobile Bay, died Wednesday at his home in Yonkers, N. Y.

A former commander in chief of the Loyal Legion, Admiral Harrington retired from the Navy in 1906.

After serving with the North Atlantic Squadron at the conclusion of the Civil War, he returned to the Naval Academy for a tour of duty lasting from 1868 until 1870.

Secret Parley With Roosevelt Aim of Norway Foreign Head

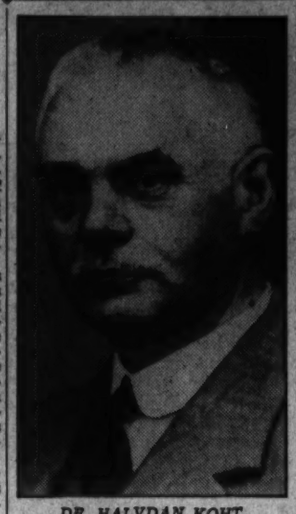
Dr. Koht Due Tuesday, Topic of His Conferences Kept Secret.

The State Department yesterday was preparing a program of entertainment and honors for Dr. Halvdan Koht, Norwegian minister of foreign affairs, who will arrive in Washington Tuesday for an official visit, on which he will converse with President Roosevelt and Secretary Hull.

Concerning the purpose of his visit and the subjects Dr. Koht is to discuss with the President and the State Department, the department was silent. Wilhelm Munthe de Morgenstierne, Norwegian Minister to the United States, said he felt any statement of official matters should come from the foreign minister himself. Dr. Koht, the envoy said, will speak to interviewers at a reception at the legation Tuesday night.

Dr. Koht has been an active participant in the General Assemblies of the League of Nations and is regarded as the foremost spokesman of the northern European states in that body. He has also represented his country in several international peace conferences.

Dr. Koht is also celebrated for his attainments in scholarship and literature. He is regarded as the greatest living Norwegian historian. He has written biographies of Bismarck, Ibsen and the Norwegian statesman Johan Sverdrup, and has edited the letters of Ibsen and Bjornson. His historical book "The Rise of the Norwegian Peasants" has been translated into French. In 1928 he presided over the international congress of historians at Oslo.



DR. HALVDAN KOHT.

Dr. Koht has paid two previous visits to this country, and seven years ago lectured in history at Harvard. Three of his books deal with the United States.

Dr. Koht became foreign minister of Norway in March, 1935, when the Labor government came to power there.

Dr. Pulsifer Rites To Be in Maine

Funeral services for Dr. Woodbury Pulsifer, 82, former assistant in the copyright division of the Library of Congress, who died Wednesday at his home, 1627 Hobart street northwest, will be held in Portland, Me.

Born in Auburn, Me., Dr. Pulsifer had served as clerk of the Senate Commerce Committee and secretary of the National Waterways Committee. Following graduation from Bowdoin, he served as official stenographer for the Supreme Court of Maine, from 1875 to 1879.

He came to Washington in 1889 as secretary to the late Senator Frye. He was a graduate of the school of medicine at Columbian University, now George Washington. He had practiced medicine for only a brief period.

Boyle, Electrician, Ex-Sailor, 44, Dies

Henry Frederick Boyle, 44, of Berwyn, Md., assistant chief electrician at the Munitions Building and veteran of the World War, died in Naval Hospital Wednesday of heart disease.

In the Navy for 16 years, Boyle retired in 1926 and became a member of the Fleet Naval Reserve.

In the World war he was a cheif petty officer aboard a submarine in the North Sea. He held this rank at the time of his retirement.

Surviving Boyle are his wife, Mrs. Carrie Boyle, and two daughters, Mrs. Lonnie Bullock and Miss Constance Boyle, all of Berwyn.

Funeral services will be held at Chambers' Riverdale undertaking establishment this afternoon at 2 o'clock, followed by burial with military honors in Arlington Cemetery.

H. G. Wells Talks to Roosevelt And Declares Him No Dictator

After a "private conversation and an excellent lunch" with President Roosevelt yesterday, H. G. Wells, British author and prophet, said with finality the President is no dictator. "I think you have no danger in him," he commented.

"I came to Washington in 1906 after writing a book everybody has forgotten called Americans in the Future," Wells said. "I said two things about America then—that it was adrift toward Socialism and that it did not have a good enough Civil Service; also that education in America did not give a man the sense of State necessary to him if he was going to be a good citizen. That wasn't bad for 1906."

Turning to the present, the famous writer said:

Of the American Administration: "I got very excited about New Deal and the idea of the brain trust. I thought it was an enterprising notion toward a great intellectual force. I called on the President then and I called again, and now I am still talking to him about the brain trust."

Of President Roosevelt—"My belief is that he is an honest man in control of a great state, but he has had terrific difficulties with a country that is not prepared to modernize itself. He has had the Constitution, which is too rigid, and the absence of material for a good civil service. It hasn't been licked into the people. You need that enormously to run this country."

Of the Duke of Windsor as a housing expert—"I am not a gossip commentator. I thought some about it at first, but I have nothing to say about that stuff any more."

He would not comment on the American Supreme Court. His face seemed agonized when the question came.

Beware Coughs from common colds That Hang On

No matter how many medicines you have tried for your cough, chest cold, or bronchial irritation, you can get relief now with Creomulsion. Serious trouble may be brewing and you cannot afford to take a chance with any remedy less potent than Creomulsion, which goes right to the seat of the trouble and aids nature to soothe and heal the inflamed mucous membranes and to loosen and expel the germ-laden phlegm. Even if other remedies have failed, don't be discouraged, try Creomulsion. Your druggist is authorized to refund your money if you are not thoroughly satisfied with the benefits obtained from the very first bottle. Creomulsion is one word—not two, and it has no hyphen in it. Ask for it plainly, see that the name on the bottle is Creomulsion, and you'll get the genuine product and the relief you want. (Adv.)

Making

Growing children with an abundance of energy usually do make the grade . . . and with ease.

Every thoughtful mother recognizes this fact . . . mothers know too that children need help to build and maintain blood strength.

Particularly is this true with those who have suffered some illness or who look pale . . . tire easily . . . are underweight . . . or have lost their zest for food.

S.S.S. Tonic helps build Sturdy Health

S.S.S. Tonic is especially designed to build-up children's health through the red-blood-cells, thus putting them in better condition to enjoy the food they eat and to regain lost weight . . . all which make for greater strength and vitality.

Full directions are on each bottle of S.S.S. Tonic, which comes in two convenient sizes. The larger size at a saving in price.

Help your child to "make the grade" by starting him or her on a course of S.S.S. Tonic now. There is no substitute for this time-tested remedy and no ethical druggist will suggest something "just as good." © S.S.S. Co.

MARY HAWORTH'S MAIL

May Girl Have Other Beaux When Wearing Fraternity Pin of Man Who Hasn't Proposed?

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: Last Christmas a young man whom I had known several months fell deeply in love with me and I with him. Our love was genuine, based on mutual respect and satisfying companionship. In fact, it was the most wonderful thing that ever happened in my life, although I had thought myself in love several times before. My friend is almost 26 and I am 20. We are students in different colleges. He is a fine chap, everything a gentleman should be, with family and background equal to mine. My family approves of him and he told his mother, who approves of our romance, that I am the only girl for him.

* * * *

I have accepted and am wearing his fraternity pin, which he considers binds me to him to the exclusion of other boy friends. After several months of going with him steadily, I have now come to feel that I do not love him as I once did, and I should like to go out with other young men. He insists, however, that I should have dates only with him, and says if I am not willing to do this I should return his pin and our romance should end.

* * * *

Although he is very possessive in his love for me, he has never once suggested that we become engaged, nor has he made any references to the future or to marriage. Six months ago, I loved him so much that, had he asked me to, I would have married him that minute. But I no longer love him that devotedly, yet I cannot bring myself to hurt him and, frankly, I do not want to break with him.

* * * *

He knows that, although my father likes him, he doesn't want me to marry anyone at present. It might be that father's feeling on this subject has been responsible for his side-stepping any talk of an engagement. I approve of our not being engaged, anyway, because he must finish his law course and I want to finish my college work before thinking of marriage. And besides, his present salary couldn't support two persons.

* * * *

All this being true, it is depressing to feel that I "belong" to him to such an extent that I cannot go out with other friends. I have refused many dates which I would have really enjoyed. The few dates I have had were made miserable (for me) by the fear that he might find out and might be hurt.

* * * *

Do you think he is selfish in asking for all my time while remaining noncommittal about plans for the future? Or am I expecting too much? Please help me. I have great confidence in your sensible handling of others' problems and I am anxiously awaiting your advice on mine. Sincerely.

COLLEGE STUDENT.

She's Free as Air.

DEAR COLLEGE STUDENT: The young man is being extremely selfish, pig-headed and dog-in-the-manger-ish in assuming a dictator's authority over your personal life and social liberty. There is no reason on earth why you should not go out with as many young men as you care to go out with, and have the opportunity to go out with—and there are two excellent reasons why you should. These reasons are—first, the fact that you are not even tentatively engaged to the one youth, despite the fact that he has attempted to put his brand on you, so the speak, by permitting you to wear his fraternity pin; and, second, the fact that you no longer love him with a whole-souled, exclusive devotion, and actually hunger for other masculine friendships.

* * * *

Even if a tentative engagement existed, still, since it would necessarily be years before you could marry, you should be left entirely free to enjoy a comradely social interchange with any nice boys whose invitations you cared to accept. True love does not need to be handcuffed and hog-tied and condemned to social isolation. Indeed, no speedier means could be devised for putting true love to death than this.

* * * *

I am convinced you have outgrown your first overwhelming infatuation with this young man; that it was one of those ephemeral devotions that are a natural concomitant of youth; and that all you feel for him today is a fine, affectionate friendship which takes into account his many excellent qualities. Because one's devotions at 20 are apt to be just such intense and short-lived affairs as this, it is never wise to leap into an engagement or a marriage too quickly at that age.

* * * *

My advice to you is to explain to the young man that your feeling for him has undergone an almost complete metamorphosis in the last six months; that you feel it is only fair to yourself and himself to make this known; and that, in fairness to yourself, in particular, from now on you propose to accept whatever other interesting invitations come your way from other men. Tell him you shall be very sorry if this decision means the end of your friendship; that you are really deeply devoted to him. In a way would like to continue seeing him as one of your very best—if not your first best friend—but that if he feels this must be the end, why, here is his pin—and good-by!

* * * *

You simply can't afford to waste your youth being dictated to by a selfishly inconsiderate young man, you know. And it's my guess you won't have seen the last of him even if he does grab his pin and depart in a huff. If he has any elements of generosity and common sense in his make-up, he'll be back eventually to make amends and try his chances all over again on a new basis. And if he doesn't come back you're a thousand times better off without him. For a bossy suitor inevitably presages an iron-handed husband.

M. H.

Tomorrow's Problem.

Twice in six years, husband who has been married for nearly two decades, has left his wife for other women. He tired of the first affair in five months and was welcomed back by his wife. Now after a second illicit romance, he would return again. Should she take him back, is wife's question. It will be answered here tomorrow.

Easy to Wear, Smart and Practical

The casual hat in a chic and simple shako turban version made of jersey in an effective tri-color scheme is shown at left. It is of Hindu influence and equally appropriate to accompany suits or frocks. An English walking hat of felt, with subtly rolled brim, accented by a chic narrow veil; ideal to complement tweeds and woolens, and one of the most wearable hats of the season.

By Ethel Ehlen.
The Post Fashion Editor.

If you think all hats have gone silly and "haywire" it is because you have not seen the conservative, yet smart models, which are really available if you seek them out. Even in a season when it has become the vogue to adopt extreme-styled hats for every costume it is grand to have one or two simple little models tucked away in the clothes closet to vary the current trend for luxury and elgance. The type of hat tha tyou don't have to "dress up to," but which is definitely one of the latest fall versions. As paradoxical as it may seem, however, these casual type of hats have also acquired a bit of glamour.

Bachelors Prefer Their Women Well Bred, Smart and Charming

By Genevieve Reynolds.

DO YOU WANT to be popular with all men? Or do you prefer to get the one man that is important to your happiness? Decide which will make you the happier. Then find out how the type of girl the man or men you admire like their girls and play up those essential qualities in yourself.

It can be done. All is not mere theory, for Louise Paine Benjamin, in her book, "Why Men Like Us—Your Passport to Charm," just published by Stackpole Sons, gives practical suggestions on how to check up on your qualities that appeal to men.

Miss Benjamin, who is beauty editor of the Ladies Home Journal, interviewed men of all ages and professions to find out their ideas as to what constitutes charm in women. She sought the opinions of conservative men, modern men, old men, young men, doctors, lawyers, headwaiters, dance partners, husbands, artists, cameramen and Latin lovers.

What kind of women do the gay bachelors like?

That depends on what they are dating them for. For a dance they want a smooth dancer, who looks well on the floor and has a flair for clothes. For a cocktail party they want a worldly, decorative girl who can hold up her end of the conversation.

About drinking they say: "We are pretty fussy about how our girls drink. We don't want to gather them up off the floor after parties or have them get sloppy, amorous or quarrelsome. And we don't want to reform them. It's easier to leave them alone."

According to the bachelors, the girls who get the most invitations are the girls who are well bred, carry their clothes well and convey a sense of aliveness. As to age, these men like their women friends "past

What do the fascinating foreigners consider as charm?

Englishmen like women to be modest and retiring but able to share in their sports.

An Italian man told the author this: "When an American girl goes out with a man she frequently gives him the feeling that she is out simply for an evening of diversion, not because she cares about his company. She has no listening power. She is preoccupied and cannot sit still and concentrate. Her eyes do not meet yours. Foreign women create an impression of being absorbed by what is being said that is stimulating and flattering.

If you want to be popular with the modern young man, the author makes these suggestions that come from the boys themselve: "Be a person, not a vine, not an echo. Be informed, not opinionated. Have a pet interest, but don't ride a hobby to death. Don't try to revolutionize your type. Learn to participate in sports and learn to be a good dancer."

Things men wish women wouldn't do, as revealed by Miss Benjamin in her book, are: Wearing deep red fingernail polish; keeping men escorts waiting; having crooked seams or run-down heels; finding faults; being careless with liquor.

A WOMAN'S NEW YORK

By Alice Hughes

New York, Oct. 21.

UP TO now the great bulk of our girlhood has been forced to pick up its manners from the movies, or the fancier sort of fiction of the "Unhand me, Maltravers!" type. A comparatively small group of the more privileged, of course, have learned which fork and how to make up, dress up and walk at stylish finishing schools. For most of us, however, seemly behavior has been largely a matter of pot luck—some good, some terrible.

ALICE HUGHES.

Here, within the last two weeks, a small beginning has been made at formal instruction in the amenities of life, designed for the use of girls headed for careers outside the home. Already a course of this sort has been started at our Hunter College, the huge municipal female seminary, with 40 young careerists enrolled, and Mrs. Katherine Bleecker Meigs in command. Though Mrs. M. is registered blueblood of these parts, with a pretty elegant education and a New York debut in her past, these things are not held against her. She knows whereof she preaches, since for six years she has been in charge of the personal service of the Postal Telegraph Co. here, and is president of the New York League of Business and Professional Women.

Now she is truly pioneering. Forty girls listen to her wise words as to how to look and behave their topnotch best in the business world. So far she has given them fairly trite fundamentals, such as warnings not to substitute perfume for soap and water, or to avoid office gossip, or to eschew flashy raiment and gaudy make-up. These are elemental, but vital. Later she will pass to finer points of the game of life. A worthy stark this. It will help to avoid many a girlish heartbreak, perhaps, and Mrs. Meigs is happy about it.

GIRL ABOUT TOWN—I just came across an old interview I once did with Dorothy Parker, noted wit, poet and story-writer, also ex-spitfire. She told me then that she defined chivalry as "grace under pressure" (very good, too) and that grace and chivalry were all that remained important to her in the world. Heigho, how time and events change us! Now she has the love of a young husband and a grand farm in Bucks County, Pa., and I wouldn't hold Dashing Dotty to her tragic statement of a few years ago! . . .

Finally got around to seeing Gertrude Lawrence in "Susan and God." Didn't like the play, and didn't like Gertie much. She can either be great or pretty awful, this long-legged English vet. But her Hattie Carnegie clothes are something pretty terrific . . .

I hear that Beatrice Kaufman quit her story-scouting job for Sam Goldwyn because she and George S., the playwright, have adopted a youngster, and Bea wants to keep the house and play Mama . . .

TODAY'S HEALTH TALK

By Logan Clendening, M. D.

Treatment of Cold.

The cold virus—if a virus is the cause of the common cold—enters the body through the lining of the nose. Why it enters at any particular time is a mystery, but according to the theory of Dr. Lloyd Arnold, it occurs when the lining has been chilled enough to cause an anemic condition. This theory makes sense, inasmuch as it accounts both for the infection and the influence which temperature has on the origin of the common cold.

Certain people are sensitive to cold; some people are resistant. In cold-resistant patients, nose temperature returns to normal in ten minutes. In susceptible persons it requires from 30 minutes to two hours for the lining of the nose to return to normal temperature.

The treatment of chronic recurrent colds, as recommended by Dr. Arnold, is a warm morning bath, followed by a cold one, one hour's walk in the open air regardless of weather, and a low carbohydrate diet—all designed to change the heat-sensitive person to heat-resistant or normal.

The common form of a chronic cold, however, is probably due to chronic infection of the nasal sinuses. In the course of time this produces a chronic bronchitis from pus dropping into the bronchial tree from the nose. These patients are very sensitive to change in temperature and drafts, and any draft produces a flare-up of their acute infection with all the symptoms of a cold. They say on these occasions that they have "caught cold." As a matter of fact, they have simply lighted up an old chronic infection. Cure of the nasal infection will, in most instances, relieve their troubles.

Still another form of chronic colds occurs in those people who have respiratory allergy. Some are sensitive to plant pollens, but these have a seasonal type of respiratory allergy. Those who are sensitive to foods and animal danger are the ones who are likely to have recurrent attacks of what are often diagnosed as colds all the year round. Treatment here consists of recognizing the condition, discovering what animal or food is responsible for it, and protecting the patient from contact.

YOUR FIGURE, MADAME!

Beauty Prize Winner's Hipline Exceeds Her Bust Measure!

By Ida Jean Kain.

IF YOUR hipline exceeds your bust measurement by more than two inches, take hope—so does the current Miss America's.

Miss Bette Cooper, of Hackettstown, N. J., literally ran away with the national honors in the Atlantic City contest. She is 5 feet 6½ inches tall, and weighs 120 pounds. She has a bust measurement of 32 inches; hips, 36 inches, and waist, 26 inches; thigh, 20 inches; calf, 13 inches; ankle, 8½ inches. According to the accepted standards in symmetry, Miss Cooper's hip measurements are very nearly perfect and she is an exceptionally pretty girl.

The Miss America of 1936 was ultra-streamlined. Miss Rose Veronica Coyle, of Philadelphia, who occupied the throne that year, had these measurements: Bust, 34 inches; waist, 23½ inches; hips, 34¾ inches; calf, 13 inches; ankle, 8½ inches. With her height of 5 feet 4 inches, these measurements represent perfection that a movie queen might envy.

The runner-up in this year's contest, Miss Alice Emerick, of Fort Worth, Tex., has a set of measurements somewhere between those of the two queens—and they are not at all bad: But, 34 inches; waist, 26 inches; hips, 36 inches; thigh, 20 inches; calf, 13 inches; ankle, 8 inches.

Miss Ruth Covington, of Charlotte, N. C., also named for second place in the contest, is beautifully proportioned: Height, 5 feet 4 inches; weight, 115 pounds; bust, 35 inches; waist, 23½ inches; hips, 36 inches. During Miss Cooper's informal abdication, Miss Covington and Miss Emerick shared in her glory.

For the first time, talent entered into the requirements of the contestants. Beauty counted, of course, but it was no handicap if the contestant knew how to play the accordion, sing, or tap dance. A number of the contestants were adept tap and specialty dancers, and it is interesting to note that the girl whose hobby is acrobatics, tap dancing and high kicking, has a hip measurement 1 inch less than the bust. It is Frances LeSultan, of Virginia, who has this lovely figure: Height, 5 feet 6 inches; weight, 123 pounds; bust, 34 inches; waist, 24 inches; hips, 33 inches; thigh, 20½ inches; calf, 13 inches; ankle, 8½ inches. That's what high kicking will do for your hipline!

There is nothing like a beauty contest to establish definitely the close connection between exercise and pulchritude. Sports are the favorite recreation of these girls—they swim, ride horseback, go bicycling, play tennis and golf, and hike. And the composite Miss America for 1937 has a truly beautiful figure, with these measurements: Bust, 33¾ inches; waist, 25 inches; hips, 35¼ inches. The waistline is 8¾ inches less than the bust, and the hipline exceeds the bust by only 1½ inches.

Army, Civilian, Diplomatic and 'Cave Dweller' Society Sees U. S. and Belgian Equestrians Compete at Meadowbrook

Distinguished Sports Enthusiasts Turn Out in Throngs; Members of Teams and Others Attend Party at 1925 F Street Club.

By Hope Ridings Miller,
The Post Society Editor.

Sporting society found all roads leading to Meadowbrook yesterday afternoon as the Inter-American Horse Show's "Army Day" classes got under way to the tun eof a stirring melody played by the Third Cavalry Mounted Band.

In a sylvan setting bordered with bronze and gold trees, one of the most thrilling equestrian events in the Capital in many years entertained a distinguished throng for well over five hours. From Army and civilian crowds, from the Diplomatic Corps and "cave dweller" circles came a surprising number of notables—more, in fact, than any sports contest that I have seen here since the Inter-American last year.

While the gold, crimson and black Belgian flag fluttered from one pole and the Red, White and Blue from another, members of the Belgian Army Team competed with the United States Army Team in several classes with the jumping event giving spectators one of the choice thrills of the afternoon.

Belgian Ambassador Arrives Early

Among early arrivals were the Belgian Ambassador and Countess van der Straten-Ponthoz, who sat in a box directly beneath the judges' stand proudly watching their countrymen display superior horsemanship. Across the aisle sat the Secretary of War and Mrs. Harry H. Woodring, the latter smartly dressed in a red suede sports suit set off with a brown hat and brown accessories. With the Woodrings was the Secretary's aide, Capt. William Ritchie, spendidly attired in "dress blues" replete with gold braid and fancy buttons.

To the right of Mrs. Woodring was Mrs. Jonathan Wainright in a brown ensemble, and on down the line were Mrs. Milton O. Boone, wife of Maj. Boone and Mrs. Albert W. Kenner, wife of the Fort Myer post surgeon. In the second row was Col. Wainwright and a line of Army men, also turned out in "dress blues." Looking back over to what might be called the "Belgian side," one glimpsed the Second Secretary of the Belgian Embassy, Gerard Walravens, sitting with Mme. Walravens and Senorita Rebeca Trucco, daughter of the Chilean Ambassador.

Between classes, spectators turned their attention to seeing who else had come to the show, and to right and left discovered there were plenty of social lights.

The Polish Ambassador, Count Jerzy Potocki, dressed in biscuit-colored tweeds and sporting a walking stick, was greeting friends on all sides. The Ambassador of Italy busied himself with turning his camera toward the field and snapping pictures throughout the entire show. With him were Donna Matilde de Suvich, in a black suit and hat brightened with a yellow scarf, and Countess Roberti, wife of the Secretary of the Italian Embassy, whose gray ensemble was also finished off with a yellow scarf, matching a camel's hair coat slung across her arm.

On down the line were Admiral and Mrs. Cary T. Grayson, she in a trim black suit with a brown fur collar and hat to match, and Admiral and Mrs. Adolphus Andrews. Not far away were Mrs. Hugh Auchincloss, in a high black hat and black suit topped by a vari-colored coat; Mrs. William Cushman in a green ensemble and Mrs. William P. McCracken.

In another box were Mrs. William A. Morgan in a blue suit and hat with a plaid coat across her lap; Mrs. Edward Wilber in a black suit and veiled hat and a mink cape; Dr. and Mrs. J. Breckinridge Bayne, the latter in a stunning gray suit and hat, making such a distinguished picture everyone who didn't know her was inquiring who she was.

On the other side of the line of boxes was a young woman in a black and white checked skirt, a tailored jacket and a Scotch hat, who talked animatedly in French during the entire show. She was Mme. Ferdinand Poswick, wife of Lieut. Poswick of the Belgian team, who enjoyed the sports spectacle as much as anyone there, and who clapped her hands with delight when her husband's horse made one of the highest jumps of the afternoon.

Also at the show were Gen. and Mrs. Peyton March, the latter in a navy blue suit and feathered hat; Mrs. Jean R. L. de Sibour, the former Valerie Prochnick; Mrs. Francis P. Garvin, the former Hope Jackson, in a rose jacket with a black skirt and a black beret; Mrs. John Crane, wife of Col. Crane; Mrs. Harold Hinton and Wolcott Waggaman; Mrs. George Pulver, Mrs. Pearson Rust, Mrs. Gules Merrill in a green suit, mink cape and brown beret; Mrs. Dudley Myer, and Mr. and Mrs. Jack Marshall and their house guest, Mrs. Gordon Eager, of Concord, N. H.; Dr. William McClellan and Maj. Horace Smith, who had an important part in making the show a success.

F Street Club Scene of Gay Gathering

Following the show, members of the American and Belgian teams, their wives and scores of other guests went to the 1925 F Street Club, where a number of other persons were guests of Mrs. James Freeman Curtis.

Mr. and Mrs. Robert Woods Bliss, who attended the show, were among those who went on to the club to enjoy Mrs. Curtis' hospitality. Attired in a velvet fitted frock with a white satin cravat and a hat from which flowed a black ostrich plume, the hostess greeted her guests and assisted by Mrs. Louis Caldwell, who wore a black ensemble and silver-fox furs, ushered them on to the dining room where a buffet was spread with dainties of the type that have made the F street club famous for its food.

Across the room drinks were served, and guests who wished sat at tables to enjoy the refreshments and watch the gay crowd of Belgian and American officers who chatted with each other and with other guests about a variety of subjects—but mainly the show.

Among those glimpsed in the gathering were the Austrian Minister and Mme. Prochnik, Mrs. John Hay Whitney in a checked coat and buff riding breeches, the same outfit she wore at the show, in which she participated; Eugene Vidal, the Belgian Ambassador and Countess van der Straten-Ponthoz, the latter wearing a smart black suit with a turquoise blouse and black hat; Maj. and Mrs. Frank L. Whittaker, she in a natural-colored suit with a green cravat and brown hat; Mrs. Wallach Merriam, who assisted at the tea table; Mrs. Albert B. Dewey in one of the most attractive black ensembles there; Mr. and Mrs. Morris Clark, Mr. and Mrs. Harold Hinton and many more—all thrilled with the show and many lingering on at the F street club to enjoy the party as long as it lasted.

"What could be better than this?" was the way one of the Belgian officers expressed it as he nibbed a dainty biscuit filled with chutney and bacon. "Is it always like this in America—wonderful parties following every horse show? How extraordinary!"

About the Town

With Dudley Harmon

NOT DISCOURAGED by the fact that most of the society night club singers, with the exception of Eve Symington, have faded out somewhat to the relief of patient patrons, members of the younger generation with vocal ambitions would still rather be torch singers than opera stars. Most of them prefer to train their voices to the husky blues timbre of a Libby Holman rather than to the high C's of a Lily Pons.

Mrs. Lothrop Stoddard discovered this interesting fact when she began giving lessons at her Georgetown home recently to a group of young lady pupils. A singer of real ability, she is the wife of the author of "The Rising Tide of Color" and other books on international problems. In addition to the pupils whom she instructs at her home, Mrs. Stoddard also has a class at Holton Arms School.

MYRON HOFER is the latest member of Capital society to be "in trade." He is interested in a new business in old furniture and with Jimmy Mitchell is taking a prominent part in a recently "done-over" antique shop on Dupont Circle.

Mr. Hofer's home on F street is filled with charming objets d'art from all over the world. It was formerly the home of Mrs. J. Borden Harriman, our Minister to Norway.

Mrs. William Chapin Huntington shortly will issue invitations for a very small tea a week from Sunday in honor of the Commissioner of Immigration and Mrs. James Houghteling. The latter is the former Miss Laura Delano, daughter of Frederick Delano, and lived in Chicago before Mr. Houghteling was appointed last spring to his present post. They are occupying the home of Dr. and Mrs. A. Y. P. Garnett on Wyoming avenue. Mr. and Mrs. William Lacey are giving a small cocktail party on Monday afternoon at 2556 Massachusetts avenue. Mrs. Lacey is a great friend of the Commercial Secretary of the British Embassy and Mrs. Heywood and met her husband while visiting them here not so long ago. The Laceys recently returned from Denver.

GOINGS AND COMINGS: More State Department transfers continue to raid Washington society of some of its members. Edward G. Trueblood has been assigned to Santiago, Chile, where he will serve as Second Secretary of Embassy. He has already seen duty at several other Latin American posts, including Bolivia and Costa Rica. He and Mrs. Trueblood, who live in Alexandria, will leave in January. . . . Sidney O'Donoghue, of the Department, leaves tonight to motor to Key West and from there will go to Havana, where he will be Second Secretary of our Embassy . . . This has nothing to do with the State Department, but Mr. and Mrs. John Preston have taken a house in Mount Kisco, N. Y. They have been living in Bakersfield, Calif., since their marriage last year. Mrs. Preston is the daughter of Mrs. Henry Dwight, of Washington, and plans a visit here before Christmas.

COMMANDER AND MRS. PAUL H. BASTEDO will return this evening from a short trip to New York, where they stayed at the Plaza . . . Signora Augusto Rosso left yesterday for New York and will sail October 30 for Moscow, where her husband is Ambassador from Italy. There seems to have been some confusion about whether she should be called Donna or just Signora, but an official at the Italian Embassy says the former title is given only to noblewomen or the wives of members of the cabinet. One says "Donna Matilde" in referring to the wife of Italian Ambassador de Suvich, because her husband was formerly undersecretary of state.

Betty M. Lepley Is Married to James S. Beattie

The Rev. Thomas G. Smyth Officiates at Soldiers Home Chapel.

Miss Betty M. Lepley, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Matthew G. Lepley became the bride of James S. Beattie yesterday at 6 p. m. at Soldier's Home Chapel. The Rev. Thomas G. Smyth officiated. Church decorations consisted of white flowers, palms and oak leaves. The nuptial music was played by Prof. Wheaton Howard.

Given in marriage by her father, the bride wore ivory velvet cut on princess lines with a high cowl neckline and sleeves shirred to the elbow, and then from the elbow closely fitting to the wrist. Her veil of ivory tulle was fastened to a beaded Juliet cap. Her dress extended to a long train. She carried white orchids and lilies of the valley.

Her sister, Mrs. Frank A. Miles served as her matron of honor. Her dress of baby blue velvet fit closely over the hip and then swung into a full skirt. With it she wore gold slippers and a gold headdress and carried gold chrysanthemums.

Miss Helen J. Beattie, sister of the bridegroom, was maid of honor and wore China blue velvet cut along the same lines as the costume chosen by the matron of honor. Other attendants were Miss Jeanne Murphy, Miss Alice Blanchard, Mrs. Daniel J. Coughlin, jr., and Miss Betty Hartman. The color of the dresses graduated from light blue into the ivory velvet of the bride's gown. All of the bridesmaids carried bronze chrysanthemums.

Daniel J. Coughlin, jr., and John W. Latimer served as best men, while the ushers were Kenneth W. King, William Boteler, Harry Maginness and Rouzar.

At the reception, which took place at the home of the bride's parents, the mother of the bride wore black velvet with short puffed sleeves and a matching black velvet turban.

Both the bride and bridegroom attended George Washington University.

Peggy Mahoney's Bow to Be Made In Mid-November

Peggy Mahoney, daughter of the First Secretary of the Canadian Legation, Merchant Mahoney, made news a while back when it was announced that she would be the only debutante from the Diplomatic Corps this year. Now she makes news again, for her presentation will take place at the legation under the auspices of the Canadian Minister and Lady Marler at a tea in mid-November.

Later Mr. and Mrs. Mahoney will have a dance for her at their residence on Garfield street, and it is probable that she also will be presented in Canada at the first drawing room of the Ottawa eason.

Mrs. Ford Will Attend Farm Council Session

Wife of Motor Magnate to Arrive Here Today With Party of Friends; Mrs. Boocock to Preside at All-Day Meeting in University Clubhouse.

By Jessie Ash Arndt.
The Post Club Editor.

Mrs. Henry Ford arrives from Detroit this morning with a party of friends to attend the meeting of the National Council of the Woman's Farm and Garden Association, which will be held at the clubhouse of the American Association of University Women. Mrs. Murray Boocock, of Castalia, Charlottesville, Va., the new national president, will preside at the all-day session.

A luncheon was given yesterday afternoon in Mrs. Boocock's honor at the Washington Club by the Capital Division, of which Mrs. Jay Winston Johns, of Ash Lawn, Charlottesville, is president. Mrs. Francis King, of South Hartford, N. Y., widely known author and lecturer on garden subjects and honorary president of the national association, was one of the guests.

The organization's primary purpose, she explained in a short talk, following the luncheon, is to bring the city and farm women together and enable those in the cities to help their sisters in the country find a market for their produce. It has helped establish women's farm markets and devised other plans by which those in rural districts could find buyers for their eggs, turkeys, fruits and vegetables and for their handicraft as well.

She believes co-operatives should be formed, under the sponsorship of the association, to promote such work. The New England association, one of the most active, has given scholarships to 80 women during the past few years, for training in out-door occupations. One is a Girl Scout who received the Lou Henry Hoover Scholarship and is now a student at the Pennsylvania School of Horticulture for Women, in Ambler, Pa.

Mrs. King drove to Washington yesterday morning from Harrisburg, Pa., where she had addressed a garden club, and goes from here to Virginia to visit Mrs. Boocock and on to Chicago and Tuscon, Ariz. She has written nine books on gardening, has another under way, and holds honorary membership in countless garden clubs throughout the country.

Mrs. Boocock outlined plans for increasing the membership of the association and broadening its field of usefulness. Mrs. Johns spoke briefly of the work of the Capital division, which embraces branches in Maryland, headed by Mrs. Frederick Lewton, State vice president; the District, Mrs. Arthur T. Esgate, vice president; Virginia, Mrs. Frank Ball, vice president; and West Virginia.

In her introduction of Mrs. Boocock, she mentioned the signal honor bestowed on her two years ago when she was awarded a medal as Charlottesville's most valued citizen. Mrs. Johns also paid tribute to the late Mrs. Otto Veerhoff, who was a former president of the Capital division and whose daughter, Miss Amy Veerhoff, was a guest at the luncheon and responded to the tribute to her mother.

Others at the president's table were Mrs. Walter R. Tuckerman, Mrs. Bartlett F. Johnston, Mrs. Sidney Andrews, Mrs. Finis J. Garrett, Mrs. Philip Sidney Smith, Mrs. Charles H. Pozer, Mrs. Raymond A. Pearson and Mrs. Lewton.

Among others present were Mrs. Willoughby Chesley, Mrs. Charles Fairfax, Mrs. Carl Casey, Mrs. Esgate, Mrs. James Craig Peacock, who was chairman of hospitality; Mrs. George Lilly, Mrs. Fernando Cuneberti, Mrs. Will Lawrance, Mrs. Clarence Forsling, Mrs. W. Ridgley Chapline.

Sidwell School Faculty Entertains Board Today

The headmaster and the faculty of the Sidwell Friends School will be at home this afternoon from 4 to 6 o'clock at 1809 Eye street in honor of the board of trustees of the school.

Presiding at the tea tables will be Mrs. Albert W. Atwood, Mrs. Conway Peyton Coe, Mrs. Wilson M. Compton, Mrs. Norman T. Engel, Mrs. John Spaulding Flannery, Mrs. Felix Morley, Mrs. Merle Thorpe and Mrs. Henry A. Willard 2d.

Carabao Order Gives Dance at Willard Hotel

Col. Sheen Presides in the Absence of Gen. Frank Hines.

A dinner dance was given last night at the Willard Hotel by the Military Order of the Carabao, composed of commissioned officers of the Army, Navy and Marine Corps who served in the Philippines. The members assembled in the large ballroom for dinner, dancing and songs, reminiscent of the "Days of the Empire" when they campaigned through the rice paddies and followed mountain trails to become the "godfather" of the Philippine Commonwealth. It was a "wallowette," in which the wives and hereditary members joined in the festivities.

Col. Henry H. Sheen, U. S. A., presided in the absence of Gen. Frank T. Hines, Veterans' Administrator and Grand Paramount Carabao of the Order. Among those present were Maj. Gen. Thomas Q. Ashburn and Mrs. Ashburn, Maj. Gen. Merritte W. Ireland and Mrs. Ireland, Maj. Gen. Allen W. Gullion and Mrs. Gullion, Lieut. Gen. Friedrich von Boetticher, Military and Air Attache, Germany Embassy, and Mrs. Boetticher, Brig. Gen. Augustus B. Warfield and Mrs. Warfield, Brig. Gen. Nathaniel F. McClure and Mrs. McClure, Brig. Gen. Hugh Matthews, U. S. M. C., and Mrs. Matthews, Col. Henry H. Sheen and Mrs. Sheen, Col. Consuelo A. Seoane and Mrs. Seoane, Col. Rowland B. Ellis and Mrs. Ellis, Col. Joseph S. Cecil, Mrs. Richard L. Cave, Mrs. Daniel J. Carr, James Carr, Mme. Ulises F. Espaillat, Col. Harry Coope, Miss Stella M. Brady, Col. John P. Wade, Maj. Edward H. Conger, U. S. M. C., and Mrs. Conger, Mrs. Robert Heutematte, Fred East, Col. Thomas M. Foley and Mrs. Foley, Mrs. Bernard T. Fitzgerald, Col. Francis W. Griffin, Charles Porterfield Light, Jack Lynch, Col. Linwood E. Hanson and Mrs. Hanson, Col. Joseph F. Siler and Mrs. Siler, Capt. George T. Summerlin, chief division of protocol of the State Department, and Maj. Ferry K. Heath.

Dance Tomorrow Opens Sigma Kappa Season

The social season of the Washington Alumnae Chapter of Sigma Kappa is being inaugurated with a formal dance in the Cabinet Room of the Willard Hotel tomorrow evening, from 10 to 1. The guests of honor will be the new pledges of Zeta Chapter at George Washington University: the Misses Sue Burnett, Jeanne Spaulding, Peggy McMillen, Hazel Smallwood, Hazel Blankenbaker, Laura Ellis, Emilie Black, Eleanor Corbett, Margaret Duffy, Ella Jean Henneberger, Ruth Russell, Emily Scott and Jeanette Walker.

Mrs. J. George Wenzel, chairman of the committee on arrangements, is assisted by Mrs. John Ryerson, Mrs. Luther Gray and Mrs. Benjamin Treadwell.

By Suzanne.

MRS. MORRIS CAFRITZ, past president of the Sisterhood of Eighth Street Temple, heads a delegation of Washington women who will go to Wilmington, Del., next week to attend the convention of District Eight of the National Federation of Temple Sisterhoods, of which she is president. The district embraces Maryland, Virginia, Delaware, the District of Columbia and North Carolina.

MRS. MORRIS CAFRITZ.

The convention will be held at the duPont Hotel on Monday and Tuesday. Others who will go from here are Mrs. Jesse Miller, who is secretary of the district; Mrs. Martin Mendelsohn, the retiring secretary of the district; Mrs. Frederick Pelzman, president of the Eighth Street Temple Sisterhood; Mrs. Abram Simon, who is the founder and honorary president of the national organization; Mrs. Martin Baum, Mrs. Sidney Hechinger, Mrs. Milton Dunn, Mrs. Albert Ney and Mrs. David Simon.

Mrs. Leon Waters, president of the national organization, will address the luncheon on Tuesday, and Monday evening, at a banquet, Dr. William Franklin Rosenblum, of New York, will be the speaker. A visit to the duPont gardens will be one of the entertainment features of the convention.

Mitchell, of this city, and is anticipating with pleasure attending a meeting of the chapter again and renewing acquainance with her many friends there.

Plan Dance Tonight.

Plans are completed for the formal harvest dance of the Center Guild, to be held tomorrow in the Cafritz Auditorium of the Jewish Community Center. One of the features will be solos on the electric guitar of Ernie Wilson.

Mrs. Roosevelt Heads List of Patronesses for Function to Aid Crossnore School for Mountain Folk in North Carolina.

Mrs. William Frederick Pearson, regent of the Army and Navy Chapter of the Daughters of the American Revolution, and Mrs. Frank Royer Keefer, chairman of entertainment, assisted by Mrs. John Louis Homer, are making preparations for a benefit card party to be sponsored by the chapter next Friday afternoon at the Shoreham Hotel.

Proceeds of the affair will support the philanthropic activities of the chapter, including the work at Crossnore School, Crossnore, N. C., of which Mrs. James Garvin Field is chairman. Last year scholarships were given two little mountain girls, Ivy and Myrtle Green. The chapter furnished their room, sent them gifts at Christmas and their birthdays and provided their clothing. Army and Navy Chapter, with nearly 500 members, is the largest of the 60 in the District.

Mrs. W. H. Carter will have charge of gifts and prizes for the party and Mrs. Godwin Ordway, of the sale of candy, cake, preserves and nuts. Mrs. Keefer has charge of reservations.

Mrs. Roosevelt leads the list of patronesses for the affair. Others include Mrs. Harry H. Woodring, wife of the Secretary of War; Mrs. Morris Sheppard, Mrs. Charles Edison, wife of the Assistant Secretary of the Navy; Mrs. George S. Messersmith, wife of the Assistant Secretary of State; Mme. Cantacuzene, Mrs. George Arthur Lynch, Mrs. J. O. Richardson, Mrs. Richard LaGarde, Mrs. Henry M. Daughters of 1812 Study Constitution

Mrs. O'Neill Tells of Aims at Meeting of Executive Board.

The period of the forming of the Constitution is that on which the U. S. Daughters of 1812 concentrate their attention, Mrs. Arthur J. O'Neill, of Chicago, national president, pointed out yesterday at a meeting of her executive board at national headquarters 1461 Rhode Island avenue. The program the society has been following ever since its founding is directly in line with that being stressed by other patriotic organizations this season, in observance of the sesquicentennial.

There is greater need than ever that the constructive years from 1787 to 1815, embraced in the interests of the Daughters of 1812, be familiar to all Americans, Mrs. O'Neill declared, and the society's educational program, under the chairmanship of Mrs. Grace Hall Brosseau, former president general of the Daughters of the American Revolution, will do its part in meeting this need.

Miss Hazel Nielsen, of the Sesquicentennial Commission, addressed the national officers and State presidents briefly, outlining the commission's plan for the year's observance and presenting each member of her audience with one of the books "The Story of the Constitution."

Mrs. O'Neill entertained the members of her board at luncheon in the dining room of headquarters following the business meeting in the morning. This afternoon she will be guest of honor at a reception being given by the District of Columbia branch of which Mrs. Lane Schofield is president. This, too, will be at headquarters, with music provided by a portion of the Navy Band Orchestra. Other special guests will include presidents of other patriotic societies in the Capital.

National officers here for the meeting are Miss Minnie B. Wade, of New York, first vice president; Mrs. Howard B. Diefenbach, of Akron, Ohio, third vice president; Mrs. Joseph M. Marsh, Pittsburgh, fourth vice president; Mrs. DeWitt Smith, of Gross Park, Mich., recording secretary; Mrs. Maurice Blake, of New Brunswick, N. J., treasurer; Mrs. Henry Warren, of Hartford, Conn., historian; Mrs. William N. Porter, Richmond, Va., corresponding secretary; Miss Katherina Wootten, of Georgia, librarian, and Mrs. Norris Harris, of Baltimore, registrar.

The State presidents include Miss Alverta B. Ellis, of Colorado; Mrs. William F. Haley, of Ohio; Mrs. C. J. Allard, of Virginia; Mrs. George Norton, of Vermont; Mrs. Samuel H. Heltrich, of Maryland, and Mrs. Schofield, of the District. One national chairman also was present yesterday, having come to give a special report. She was Miss Hazel Gleffner, of York, Pa., who is chairman of the mountain school committee.

Cleveland Is Graveyard for A. L. Pilots

By Shirley Povich.

For the crime of managing a fourth-place team into fourth place, Steve O'Neill seems to have been fired at Cleveland. Certainly there isn't much other evidence against him. He failed merely to get better than fourth place with a team that merited no better than fourth. But his discharge was not unexpected. In Cleveland they do things that way.

POVICH.

The town is fast earning a reputation as the managerial graveyard of the American League. Roger Peckinpaugh was fired in midseason and so was Walter Johnson. O'Neill stuck it out for two years and a half, but the fans were howling for his scalp within two weeks after the start of last season.

* * * *

The thought probably never occurred to Cleveland fans or Owner Alva Bradley to fire the ball team and keep the manager, but it might have been a good idea. With much the same roster for the past several years, the Indians have never been able to do better than third place.

* * * *

Last season was supposed to have been a big year for the Indians—the year when they finally would develop into a pennant contender, but the team was saddled by the sore arm of Bob Feller and the illness of Johnny Allen. Over those two developments O'Neill had no control, but that apparently was no excuse. The Indians did not win the pennant, so the proper thing to do was fire the manager. Anyway, that's what happened.

* * * *

It is a dubious promotion for Oscar Vitt, late of Newark, who succeeds O'Neill as manager at Cleveland. Vitt was tops as a minor league manager after his success last season at Newark, when he produced the greatest minor league team in modern history—at least since the Orioles of the Grove, Earnshaw, Bishop, Foley era.

* * * *

Fortunate it is for Vitt that he has a two-year contract at Cleveland, for there is nothing sacred about a Cleveland manager if the Indians are not up in the race. And Cleveland ball players have learned that if they do not like their manager, then Mr. Bradley always gets them a new one. At Cleveland the ball players, not the managers, have been the boss. The ball players had Peckinpaugh fired and they had Johnson fired. They had no quarrel with O'Neill, but even the tranquillity of their relations could not hold his job for O'Neill who, as aforesaid, could do no better than fourth place with a fourth-place team.

* * * *

With O'Neill's place now filled, the mangerial situation is doubtful at only one other point on the American League map—St. Louis. There Jim Bottomley, who apparently was appointed only a stop-gap manager last summer when Rogers Hornsby got the sack, is not expected to be re-appointed for 1938.

* * * *

When the Browns' owner named Gabby Street as Bottomley's aide last summer, the belief at the time was that the venerable Street would take over the manegerial job next season. That belief has been heightened by recent developments.

* * * *

Bottomley earned the displeasure of the Browns' owners late in the

Lou Chacos AndSamFox Settle Issue

Central's Title Hopes Soar; 2,000 Fans Watch Battle.

How They Stand.

Eastern	2	0	Roosevelt	1	1
Tech	1	0	Western	0	1
Central	1	1	Wilson	0	2

By Jack Munhall.

Central jumped back into the interhigh school football series chase yesterday on a mighty leap by Sam Fox, its lanky end, who reached into the air in the second quarter to pull down a 30-yard touchdown pass from Lou Chacos and nip Roosevelt, 6-0, in Central Stadium.

It might be said that Central won its first game of the season by an arm's length, for the 6-foot-2-inch Fox stretched high to grab the spinning oval from the longing arms of Hal Marks on the 3-yard line and then wheel quickly to step over the goal.

More than 2,000 fans sat stunned by this sudden aerial thrust which temporarily removed Roosevelt from the interhigh picture at a time when rooters were pleasantly anticipating the school's first title in history.

Central Hopes Revived.

And as Roosevelt's title hopes dropped Central's skyrocketed, for the Mount Pleasanters uncovered a real ball-carrier yesterday in the slender person of Bill Ickes, who for three years has been devoting his time blocking for other backs.

But Coach Hardy Pearce decided to give young Ickes a chance yesterday, and it must have been most gratifying to watch him reel off brilliant runs. Although he was never able to completely break loose, Ickes time after time was dragged down by the Roosevelt safety. In the fourth quarter, Ickes thrilled the crowd with a 30-yard end run—a daring play executed from the Central 7-yard line. The play was called back when both teams were offside but the officials couldn't re-call the thoughts of the Central fans who now at last have seen one dangerous runner wearing the Blue and White.

Jones Plays Well.

One of the Jones boys—Charley, Central's ace center—must come in for a lot of attention. For it was Jones who blocked two kicks at crucial moments, intercepted a pair of desperate passes and backed up the line to perfection. Fans must look back many years before they can think of a better center than this Jones boy, who is playing the position for the first time this year.

The kicking of Bob Goldsworthy, Central's little quarterback, was a vital element in the triumph. Goldsworthy consistently got away beauties, although rushed hard by Booth and Dunbar, Roosevelt ends. The kicking of Roosevelt's backs and Dunbar was poor. It was a short kick that went out of bounds on the Roosevelt 30 and led to Central's touchdown.

Short Kick.

Stopped dead by the Central line on its own 12 midway in the second period, Roosevelt sent Dunbar back to punt. But the ball slipped off his foot and traveled only 12 yards before sailing out of bounds.

Taking the ball on the 30, Central for a time threatened to travel backward. Chacos was spilled for a 5-yard loss by the whole Roosevelt line on an attempted pass, but on the third play, although hurried again, he let loose an accurate heav to Fox.

Roosevelt's most serious threat materialized in the fourth quarter, when Jones centered over Wilbur Barr's head and the ball bounded crazily until Booth recovered on the Central 39. But on the second play John Doughty, Central fullback, intercepted a pass from Dick Metzler and Roosevelt's final flurry of frenzied passes was stifled by the alert Central backs.

Central showed a vastly improved team over the one that has lost games to Washington-Lee, Gonzaga and East Side. The most noticeable change was in spirit. The team fought savagely and there was no sign of the lackidasical play that has marred its previous efforts.

Yankee Laddbush was Roosevelt's star. He gained frequently on end runs and passed well, completing 5 out of 10 tries. It was on these passes that Roosevelt gained most of its yardage, for the Central line was virtually impregnable.

Quinn Frees Part of Area In War Zone

O'Hara Under Bond in Libel Suit; Races Still Off.

By the Associated Press.

Providence, R. I., Oct. 21.—Several private dwellings and small stores near Narragansett Race Track tonight were free of martial law for the first time in four days under an order of Gov. Robert E. Quinn reducing the militarized zone around the track from 1 mile to 500 yards.

Armed National Guardsmen maintained their vigil in the reduced area. Narragansett's racing secretary, Pat Horgan, canceled today's scheduled card, but announced entries would be accepted for tomorrow.

Meanwhile, Walter E. O'Hara, managing director of the track, was placed under bail of $5,000 for appearance before the grand jury by Judge Maurice Robinson, who found him "probably guilty" of libeling William E. Beehan, Larchmont (N. Y.) advertising man.

O'Hara was charged specifically with calling Beehan a "briber" in an extra edition of the Providence Star-Tribune September 8.

Witnesses were presented by Assistant Attorney General John H. Nolan to identify O'Hara as owner of the newspaper and to testify that the September 8 edition had been purchased at newsstands.

The finding, "probably guilty," is Rhode Island's method of binding a defendant over to the grand jury.

Judge Robinson, in ordering O'Hara placed under $5,000 bail, in effect continued the bail furnished by Mayor Thomas P. McCoy, of Pawtucket, when O'Hara was arrested on the charge September 9.

In Pawtucket, meanwhile, a move to air the race track controversy in the Supreme Court of the United States was pressed by a committee of three headed by Mayor McCoy.

The committee was created last night by vote of city aldermen and common councilors to "protect the right, lives and liberty" of Pawtucket residents and was granted unlimited funds to "engage counsel and other assistants" to reach its objective.

Troops assumed control over the race track last Sunday on the eve of the scheduled opening of the Narragansett fall meeting, after Gov. Quinn announced "a state of insurrection" existed at the track.

President Frick Boosts Lazzeri For Chicago Job

Memphis, Tenn., Oct. 21 (AP).—National League President Ford Frick boosted Tony Lazzeri for the Chicago Cubs managerial spot today when he told newsmen "he (Lazzeri) ould make the Cubs a good man."

Here to address the West Tennessee Teachers Association tonight, Frick termed Lazzeri, just released from the New York Yankees of the American League, "a smart baseball man, a fine fellow and, I believe, a good leader.

Of the two major leagues, Frick expressed belief "there is little difference between the two as a whole," and declared the National League "problem" is "to build up to the Yankees.

Donie Bush Offered Job With Boston

Former Pilot of Bucs, Other Teams May Accept Post.

Minneapolis, Oct. 21 (AP).—Donie Bush, baseball veteran who has piloted four different major league clubs, said today he was considering a "flattering offer" to manage the Boston National League club.

"The Boston job is mine if I say the word," Bush, present manager of the Minneapolis American Association Club, said in an interview when he arrived to confer with President Mike Kelley of the Minneapolis club. "Bobby Quinn (president of the Boston club) has made me a flattering offer and it's up to me to say yes or no."

Kelley told Bush he could remain here as manager "as long as I own the club," but added he would not stand in the way if his manager chose to go up.

"Of course," Bush said, "it is a temptation to return to the major league because it is the ambition of every manager and player to be up there. I have known Quinn for maxed the first day's events, winning the interstate jumping competition, and Mrs. John Hay Whitney's Llangollen Stables, with a fine string of hunters, cleaned up in the only hunter class of the day. The final class on the program was postponed until today.

Maryland Entry Scores on Opening Day of Inter-American Show; John Hay Whitney Jumpers Triumph.

In the open jumping class, second event of the afternoon, the United States Army team won with a clean score three times around for the veteran Ugly, with Capt. Milo H. Matteson up. Tied with Ugly on this final jump-off was Fort Myer's top horse, Clipped Wings, ridden by Maj. A. W. Roffe. He made too big a jump over the second fence, which put him too close to the third to quite make it.

There was some phenomenally good jumping in this class. The going was slippery, but in spite of this there were six clean performances in the first go-around, and no spills. Washingtonians cheered loudly for their favorite, Fenton Fadely, as he rode to a clean performance on his new jumper, Apple Jack, but the going was a little too rough on the second tour, and he came to grief with three refusals.

Only Bad Spill.

The only bad spill of the day occurred in the military team competition, when Lieut. Ferdinand Poswick had what looked to be a very dangerous fall over the Toronto bank with Acrobate, but remounted immediately and finished the course unhurt.

In the interstate team jumping, Virginia was caught short, due to several scratches at the last minute. Miss Anna Hedrick, whipper-in of the Leesburg Hunt, sportingly entered her fine old hunter, Madrigal Tom, to complete the team. She unfortunately took a spill over the fourth jump, but landed on her feet and suffered little damage. Even with Madrigal Tom, Virginia was only able to enter three horses and had to take the total score of all three, whereas the other teams were able to chose best three out of four.

Much heralded Ibrahim, the Belgian's best, according to rumor, was scratched from the first jumping event and entered fresh in the military team class, to negotiate the tremendously difficult course, with jumps ranging from 4 feet to 5 feet 6 inches, with only four faults, under the hand of Lieut. Paul Mondron.

The pageant started in a riot of color as the Fort Myer Mounted Band and a color guard from the Tenth United States Cavalry swept into the grounds. The cavalcade drew up before the box of Secretary of War Woodring. The troops dropped their guidons in salute and passed on in review.

The United States and Belgian army teams opened the day's competition in the fight for international honors. It was the open class for hunters.

Belgian Overboard.

One of the Belgian officers, Capitaine Commandant Chevalier de Menten de Horne, suffered a minor spill. His mount, Ramona, skidded in the soft earth, soggy after three days of steady rain, and pitched him to earth. Capt. de Horne got up immediately, however, and continued throughout the competition.

The team contests resume on Saturday and continue through Sunday. Individual competition is scheduled for today. Representing the United States will be Capt. Milo E. Matteson, chief of the squad; Lieut. Franklin Wing, jr.; Capt. Royce Drake, Lieut. Scott Sanford and Lieut. W. E. Wright. Capt. Isaac L. Kitts will take part in the dressage exhibit with his mount, American Lady.

The American horses are Dakota, Ugly, Dinger, Podhorski, Fralax, Renzo, Masquerader, Flitter, Joe Aleshire and Goldeseeker, Scamp's Boy, Harry Waterson, Colonel Pink, Crescent, King Hi, Soother and Fitzota.

The Belgian horses are not so numerous as the American entry but they are handpicked from the best of the Belgian army. They are Ibrahim, Ramona, Soir de Pauques, Trouvaille, Whiskey, Musaphiki X, and Acrobate.

In addition to the daily dressage exhibitions will be a demonstration of the methods used in "roading" hounds. The first pack to be shown was the Fairfax Hunts which was shown yesterday. The famous Middleburg Hunt group will be shown today, the Redland Hunt of Montgomery County on Saturday and the Riding and Hunt Club on Sunday.

Clemson Defeats Gamecocks, 34-6

Columbia, S. C., Oct. 21 (AP).—Clemson's hard-charging Tigers turned on the heat here today and defeated the South Carolina Gamecock football eleven, 34 to 6, in a Southern Conference battle before a color-surging crowd of approximately 20,000 persons. The grimly fought game under cloudless skies and a warm sun marked another link in a rivalry reaching back to 1896.

Disgusted Mascot Leaves Irish Flat

South Bend., Ind., Oct. 21 (AP). Even "Clashmore Mike," the Irish terrier mascot of Notre Dame's football squad, seems disgusted with the team's poor showing this season. The mascot has deserted.

Taken out for a practice drill by Trainer Dan Hawley, the brown terrier dashed for the gate and out of Cartier Field last night.

Coach Elmer Layden said today that Mike is a necessary part of Notre Dame's offense and must be found before Saturday's game with the Navy.

Helen Dettweiler Scores 82 to Pace Women's Golf 'Field Day' Event

Mrs. L. Platt Is Captains' Victor at 86

Mrs. A. W. Tucker's 87 Leads Second Teams; Mrs. Cornell 3rd.

By Merrell W. Whittlesey.

Aided by an eagle deuce on the seventeenth hole, Helen Dettweiler won gross honors yesterday at Congressional in the Field Day for the Women's D. C. Golf Association teams with an 82 score. Miss Dettweiler holed her second shot on the par four semifinal hole with a six iron, the ball trickling into the cup after hitting the green.

Mrs. Landra Platt, captain of the Chevy Chase team, won the team captain's award with 86-5, 81, while Ellen Kincaid and Mrs. Charlotte Stern tied for net honors in the first team play with 84's. Miss Kincaid was 90-6, 84, and Mrs. Stern 89-5, 84.

In the second team play, Mrs. A. W. Tucker, of Beaver Dam, won the captain's trophy with 100-13, 87, with Mrs. George Hussey, Army and Navy, taking the gross award with 92, and two tying for net, Mrs. S. W. DuBois, Washington, 100-13, 87, and Mrs. R. P. Huff, Kenwood, 102-15, 87.

The third team play at Kenwood found Mrs. H. King Cornwell, Columbia, annexing the gross prize in a draw with Mrs. F. L. Lewis, Congressional, at 97. Mrs. Lewis won the net with 97-16, 81, while a tie also existed in the team captain's prizes, Mrs. F. H. Kramer, Beaver Dam, 111-26, 85, and Mrs. Oscar Coolican, Chevy Chase, 98-13, 85.

Net Winners.

Other net winners in the first team play included Mrs. Betty Meckley, Mrs. H. M. Brundage, jr., Mrs. H. J. Simons, Mrs. L. G. Pray, Mrs. J. O. Rhyne, Mrs. W. R. Stokes, Marion Brown, Mrs. Bishop Hill and Miss Louis Claytor.

Additional second team prize winners were Mrs. A. A. McEntee, Mrs. T. J. Johnson, Mrs. C. P. Medley, Mrs. Florence Godfrey, Mrs. E. M. Amick, Mrs. J. C. Dale, Mrs. D. R. Hutchinson, Mrs. Gale Pugh and Mrs. Graham Freer.

Third team members on the prize list for net scores included Mrs. W. B. Jarvis, Mrs. C. T. Penn, Mrs. C. J. Wilkinson, Mrs. Walter Vogel, Mrs. R. J. Lund, Mrs. H. L. Simcoe, Mrs. Marvin Johnston, Mrs. G. Howland Chase, Mrs. W. D. Barknell and Ann Reh.

After playing the first nine in 45 and taking six on the tenth hole, Miss Dettweiler, District and Maryland champion, played the next eight holes even with men's par, including the eagle on 17. Mrs. Platt, a playing companion, also settled down on the back nine and played it in 41, including a 4-4-3 finish, one under par.

Other players breaking 90 included Mrs. Betty Meckley with 88 and Mrs. Charlotte Stern, 89.

Litkenhous Rating Places Mighty Crimson Tide at Top

By E. E. LITKENHOUS.

Tennessee by defeating Tennessee, South Carolina, Sewanee and Howard has earned for itself the top rating among the Nation's football greats. The Crimson Tide rates 101.2 Difference-by-Score power points, an average which is 1.2 scoring points better that the average for the National Champion teams for the past six years.

A rating of more than 100 points is dangerous in that it shows an over-trained condition based upon the best scoring power of the past. A letdown usually results. And a team in the peaked condition is fortunate to find a breather on its schedule the following week.

Pitt Gains Points.

The Pitt Panther rated 100.7 lost a little ground in position but gained in scoring power through its performance against the third position Fordham Ram rated 100.6. Both teams are in for a slight letdown next week.

Ohio State rated 89.3 should reverse the last year's decision over Northwestern rated 83.1 if the Buckeyes play "heads up" football. Northwestern after the punishment received in the Purdue skirmish should not present the same power next Saturday.

Harvard and Dartmouth rated 83.7 and 83.2 will find each other strong. It is a toss-up here.

The Difference-by-Score National Football Ratings are integrated power point standings of college football teams based entirely upon performance in games played this year. Should any two teams such as Auburn 92.5 and Notre Dame 80.7 play, Auburn would be expected to conquer Notre Dome by 92.5 less 80.7 or 11.8 points, about two touchdowns, should each perform exactly as it has averaged this season.

Other Factors.

Illness, injuries, student disturbances, poor weather, distance traveled, and home stands alter game conditions and influence individual performances of teams.

The Difference-by-Score system has maintained an efficiency of 87.53 per cent in 19,983 games rated. Of 1,007 games reported this season, 868 ended as predicted for an average of 88.19 per cent. The percentage for the week was 87.04 per cent.

Betty Is Chosen In Hound Show

Tom Cody, owned by Rolfe & Bland, of Washington, won best hound of the opposite sex from the best hound in show.

Steve Mamakos, Amateur Star, In Pro Debut at Arena Monday

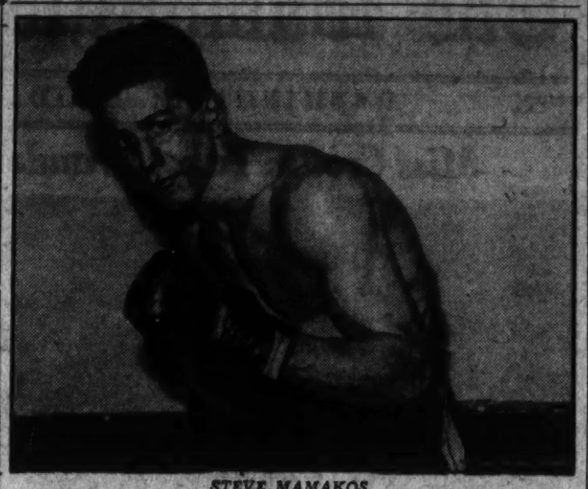
Abandons Simon-Pures on Eve of City's Big Tourney.

Steve Mamakos, considered one of the best welterweight fighters developed in local amateur circles, will turn professional and make his debut as a member of the paid clan Monday night at Turner's Arena.

The hard-hitting Greek, after debating for weeks whether to turn pro or stick to the simon-pures, yesterday made his decision. He placed himself under the management of Matt Twomey.

Matchmaker Goldie Ahearn, who has had his eye on Mamakos for several years, realizing that the youngster could match the drawing power of Lefty Lou Gevinson, immediately signed him up for a four-rounder against Alf Baker, of Baltimore, in one of the preliminary bouts on his opening fall indoor show at the Fourteenth street emporium of sock.

Mamakos, who has won the golden gloves and A. A. U. titles here, and acquitted himself nobly in national and international boxing tournaments, will box in support of the feature ten-rounder between Irish Eddie Dunne, Benny Leonard's sensational lightweight protege, and Sailor Born, of Atlanta.



STEVE MAMAKOS.

Mamakos, just 20, and full of fight, thus will be a pro stablemate of the popular Gevinson. He has been training with Lou for the last few years and is a protege of Matt Twomey.

The Monday card was spiced with the booking of an eight-round added attraction between Hobo Williams, the Alexandria Assassin, and Serge Prevost, the Fort Meade champion. It will be Williams' second bout since he gave Freddy Steele, the middleweight champion, such a stiff battle last July on the Variety Club-Washington Post show at the stadium.

Also clashing in a six-rounder is Billy Bullock, of Washington, and Willie Davis, of New York.

Nation's Grid Leaders on Spot This Saturday

By Alan Gould.

New York, Oct. 21 (AP).—Major unbeaten and untied collegiate grid outfits on hottest spots this Saturday: California against Southern California, Northwestern against Ohio State, Baylor against Texas A. & M., Detroit against Boston College, Yale against Cornell, Wisconsin against Pittsburgh and Dartmouth against Harvard.

Tip from Tennessee: Don't take it for granted that Louisiana State will knock over Vanderbilt in tussle between two Southeastern teams with perfect records . . .

Note to Gil Dobie, Boston College Coach, from our Middle Atlantic scout: "Andy Farkas (Detroit's ace halfback) is best running back seen hereabouts this season . . . he's fairly short, weighs around 190, looks easy to tag but has tremendous power and deceptive shift that sheds tacklers . . ." Farkas has tallied ten touchdowns in four games. . . .

Our Pacific Northwest operative reports: "First class all-American candidates about as scarce as undefeated teams. . . . closest to a conference standout is Joe Gray, Oregon State's Gray Ghost . . . one of reasons why Washington's Huskies took to skids after downing Southern California is injury to Al Cruver, sparkling fullback . . . Gonzaga's George Karamatic still rates as triple-threat tops in this section."

In behalf of Charley Brock, Nebraska's sensational junior center, comes this kudo: "He stops end runs and passes as often as he does line play . . . against Oklahoma, on one play, he jumped into the line before the ball was snapped, then without hesitating sprinted back to cover for a pass. . . . Last year, in the Kansas game, he snapped the ball, then got out in time to block the end on a flanker play."

Two of Big Ten's best blocking backs will do their stuff on same gridiron this Saturday: Fred Vanzo, Northwestern, and Jim McDonald, Ohio State co-captain and quarterback . . . Yale is suspicious of "bear" stories about condition of George Peck, Cornell's broken field ace . . . and followers of Big Red team hope Eli skepticism is well founded . . . North Carolina State's cosmopolitan squad this season features Eddie Berlinski, of Bloomfield, N. J., halfback; Art Rooney, of Pittsburgh, Pa., sophomore triple-threat back, and Louie Mark, of New York City, center.

Colorado's Whizzer White is good, but not even Rocky Mountain enthusiasts are yet ready to concede he's another Dutch Clark . . . Big Six scouts give concerted cheer for Pete Smith, 190-pound Oklahoma end . . . Pete's old coach, Biff Jones, paid him compliment of assigning two or three Cornhuskers to "ride him" in Nebraska game last Saturday . . . Larry Kelley, who turned pro after "telling all," has been guaranteed $500 per game by Boston Shamrocks in addition to getting bonus for signing contract.

Two leading Eastern coaches, Andy Kerr, of Colgate, and Tuss McLaughry, of Brown, have sons on their squads, but Ray Morrison went to unusual lengths to avoid similar responsibility . . . Morrison sent his son, Jack, to Vanderbilt while he was still head coach at Southern Methodist . . . Then elder Morrison shifted to Vandy, succeeding late Dan McGugin, and transferred son to S. M. U. . . . When two teams met last Saturday the son was main obstacle to victory of father's team.

Cox Is Pinned By Cliff Olsen In Rough Match

The creation of a new grip won the feature match for Cliff (Swede) Olson last night at Joe Turner's weekly wrestling show when he hurled Kansas Joe Cox from the ring with such force that his leg was trapped in a folding stationary seat of Turner's Arena.

Olsen was awarded the match when Cox was disqualified after being counted out of the ring for 10 seconds. And at the conclusion of the count it took several policemen to break the vice-like hold that the seat was exerting upon Cox's leg. Spectators seeking a better view, crowded into the ring expecting to see Cox, apparently suffering excruciating pain, destroyed. It took five minutes to free the villain.

Clara Mortensen, women's champion, successfully defended her title by disposing of Maria Gardina in two out of three falls of a return match. Clara won with a series of spins and body press after five minutes of the third fall.

Chief Thunderbird, Vancouver took his usual beating, then went into his war dance and pinned Jack Hader, Kansas, in 5½ minutes with a Japanese arm lock, and Hans Steinke, Germany, threw Jake Patterson, Syracuse, with a crotch hold, in 14½ minutes.

In the opening bouts, Carl Davis won from Walter Podolak in 15 minutes with a Japanese leg lock and Leo Mortensen, Clara's brother, won in his debut from Jim Morris, Chattanooga, in 15 minutes with a body press.

Armstrong Rules Favorite in Bout

Petey Sarron is the featherweight champion, but so little of him has been seen in these parts and so much of Henry Armstrong, the California featherweight, that the latter has been installed a 7-to-5 favorite to be returned the winner in their featherweight championship tilt at Madison Square Garden a week from Friday (October 29) night.

Sports Postscripts

When IRISH JIMMIE DUNN and SAILOR BORN square off in the ten-round feature of next week's show at Turner's Arena they will be throwing punches for their managers' as well as their own benefit . . . and this is how it works . . . BENNY LEONARD, former undefeated lightweight champion of the world, was asked to leave the Pioneer Gym in New York recently by GEORGE SHEPHARD, manager of SAILOR BORN, when he tried to watch the Gob work out . . . LEONARD, who manages and trains DUNN, is said to be hot under the collar as a result of the snub and to have a great desire to hang a defeat on the record of SHEPHARD'S boy . . . the pay off came yesterday when they met with Matchmaker GOLDIE AHEARN to come to terms, and nearly came to blows, instead . . .

George Washington is more steamed up over Saturday's battle with Alabama, than for any since the decisive one at Yorktown . . . this time, however, it is the university bearing the Father of Our Country's name that is gunning . . . placards confront you at every turn of the G.W. campus reminding the Crimson Tide that it is going to roll in undefeated and roll out defeated . . . there is to be a huge pep rally tonight on the university parking lot, and each students is asked to bring his weight in wood . . . but just by way of suggestion, it will take touchdowns, not wood, to beat Alabama . . . JIM PIXLEE, Colonial coach, spent yesterday afternoon lecturing to students on the fine points of watching a football game . . . which might not be a bad idea at that . . . if the local club should win, it would be nice for the G. W. students to know how their cohorts did it . . . largely composed of co-eds, the audience was a highly attentive one and the questions from the sweet young things were no less intelligent than the ones you and I ask . . . the best question was the one from the girl in the back row who wanted to know what kind of play was used against W. Va. Wesleyan, "where the G. W. player wanted to be alone and ended up over the goal with the ball" . . . PIXLEE then revealed that it was a sneaker play . . . and further explained that it is not listed in the G. W. eleven's code of strategy . . .

The Georgetown football team that invades Philadelphia tomorrow to tackle Pennsylvania's mighty club will be the underdog for the first time this season, and followers and friends are stressing the fact as a good omen . . . Columbus University Law School has lost the services of GENE KELLY, who is abandoning his role of news service man and Columbus University public relations representative to accept gainful employment in New York . . . an accent on golf is in progress at Louisiana State University, where the Bayou Tigers are not only out after the competitive honors in college ranks but are also setting the pace in providing students with an opportunity to take instruction and to play a game which Maj. JAMES PERRY COLE declares will last them a lifetime . . . FREDDIE HAAS, jr., of New Orleans, who was graduated last spring, and PAUL LESLIE, present team captain, have been outstanding names for L. S. U. . . .

G. W. Eleven Holds Secret Work-out for Alabama

Colonials Await Tide; Due Today

Pixlee Praises Spirit of Boys; Sampson Seen as Star.

By Lewis F. Atchison.

In the semisecrecy of Maryland's spacious practice pasture George Washington's eleven yesterday all but completed preparations for tomorrow's tussle with Alabama at Griffith Stadium, leaving only a few minor items to be attended to this afternoon.

The Tide, meanwhile, scampered through a brief workout at Tuscaloosa and was bottled up and shipped for Washington. It is scheduled to arrive this morning at 11:35 and will establish headquarters at the Willard Hotel. Later this afternoon Frank Thomas will take the squad to the battlefield for a brief workout.

While pre-game reports from the rival camps have left the impression that the game is going to be a one-team show, neither Jim Pixlee, Colonial chieftain, nor his assistants think the visitors are going to have a field day at their boys' expense.

Pixlee Sees Good Game.

"We may not win," Pixlee said, "but this gang is sure going to stir things up. They're all steamed up for Alabama, and I've never had a team show more spirit before a big game—especially before an Alabama game."

Bill Reinhart, a backfield coach with conservative opinions probably hit the problem in its most vulnerable spot, however.

"These kids are going to play 60 minutes of football, and I think we'll have reason to be proud of them, but at the same time we're not kidding ourselves about Alabama. We can't whip them by merely showing a lot of pep and fight. That's a foolish thought. Thomas' team knows a lot of football, and it has the power, speed and deception to execute its plays successfully. Defensively it's tops. So, as I see it, spirit alone isn't going to win the game for us. It'll help, but we've got to play football and play it well. I think we'll make a real ball game of it."

Sampson is Key Man.

Probably the most overlooked and at the same time most important youngster on George Washington's squad at this writing is Vic Sampson, the halfback with sandy hair, thin legs and a cream complexion. He very likely will be the key man in the Colonials' attack.

In 13 trips with the ball this season Sampson compiled an average gain of 9.6 yards. He scored two touchdowns against West Virginia Wesleyan, running 59 yards for one, and threw a pass to Jay Turner for the third and decisive.

His passing has been above reproach thus far this season, having thrown five and completed them for a net gain of 106 yards. He also seems to have the uncanny knack of knowing when not to pass, frequently dropping back to pass, only to change his mind and run the ball instead.

Sampson, who was Joe Kaufman's understudy last year, is sharing the halfback post with him this season, and thus far has turned in a better job. He has speed, courage and football intuition. He loves the game, and harbors a burning ambition to get loose against Alabama. Well, he'll get the chance tomorrow, and if he succeeds, the Southern boys may be slightly surprised.

many years and I know that we would get along fine together, but, honestly, I have been so happy in Minneapolis that it will be difficult for me to make up my mind what to do.

"I just got started talking with Mike Kelley this afternoon and I'm taking time out to go hunting. We expect to discuss the matter tomorrow morning, and I may decide then, or by Monday sure."

Bush said the offer was made to him two months ago and no definite deadline was set for his answer.

During his five years as Minneapolis leader, Bush won three pennants, in 1933, 1934 and 1935, finished fifth in 1936 and third during the season just closed. Before coming to Minneapolis he managed, in turn, Washington, the Pittsburgh Pirates, Chicago White Sox and Cincinnati Reds. He led the Pirates to a National League pennant in 1927.

Shirley Povich Leads Poll; Sam Baugh Is Weekly Guest

With Shirley Povich leading the pack with an average of .609, The Post selections go into the third week. And this time the boys are comparing averages with none other than "Slingin' Sam" Baugh, the Redskin's venerable passer.

Five tie games Saturday, which are counted as misses in this poll, accounted for a drop in the record of several of the scribes, but none fell below the .500 mark and out of deference to hecklers, it might be pointed out that if ties were counted as such instead of being included in mistakes, the averages would range from .650 up.

Smith, Beamer, Terrapin Ends, May Not Play

Maryland's hopes of stopping Syracuse's highly touted Marty Glickman and his playmates tomorrow at Baltimore slumped perceptibly last night with word that Terps will be handicapped by a dearth of wingman.

Bill Bryant and Johnny McCarthy will start the game and should handle their assignments well enough, but in the event that it is necessary to withdraw one Maryland will be in a hole. Blair Smith, a regular, is hobbling around on a bad knee, and Francis Beamer isn't even in uniform because of a broken finger which failed to knit properly.

Meanwhile Catholic University's squad, 24 players, left for St. Louis, where it tangles with St. Louis University tomorrow. The players will arrive in the "blues city" today in time for a brief workout at the game site.

Georgetown's eleven will entrain for Philadelphia today at 1 p. m., and is scheduled to practice at Franklin Field this afternoon. The squad will be quartered at the Manufacturers' Club near Germantown until noon tomorrow.

This game marks the turning point in the Hoyas' schedule. A victory will go far toward righting Coach Jack Hagerty's wobbly craft, but defeat may increase its downward momentum. Spirits at the Hilltop are good and the team seems ready for the question, but it faces a real opponent in Penn.

County Soccer Teams See Action

Two Prince Georges County soccer elevens will battle each other today in an attempt to raise their standards within the county, while one entertains a Montgomery team in the hope of coming out on the long end of the score.

Bladensburg, which just a week ago defeated Mount Rainier High, 2-0, will entertain Marlboro High in the first contest of the season between the two schools. This game will give the fans of the county an opportunity to size up the upper and lower section.

Mount Rainier High will play host to Maryland Park. The first game between these two schools ended in a scoreless tie, which points to a hard-fought battle on the Mounts' field today at 3:30.

Hyattsville High, which has won both of its county games to date, will try its luck out of the county when it entertains the fast-stepping Rockville High crew, of Montgomery County.

Doerer, Links Manager, Scores Ace on 6th Hole

Tom Doerer, manager of the West Potomac golf course, joined the hole-in-one club yesterday as he aced the sixth hole of the riverside course, the ball hitting on the green and bouncing in the cup.

He was playing with Jack Grimm and Lou Spangler.

High School Grid Season Hits Zenith

By Jack Munhall.

The scholastic football season reaches its zenith today as no less than eight local and nearby Virginia elevens compete on an attractive card.

Although all the games are expected to be closely contested, because no team appears overmatched, the clashes between St. John's and Western in Western stadium, and Tech and Wilson, in a crucial interhigh struggle in Tech stadium, headline the program.

Tech, defending champion, is aiming for first place now held by Eastern, which has won two games in as many starts, while Tech captured its only game. St. John's surprising cadets, who have already figured in two slight upsets by deadlocking Eastern, and Washington-Lee will receive an acid test in the ever-improving Georgetown team. Interhigh fans will closely note Western's play today to see if it is improved over the Tech game in which great potential strength was indicated.

Since the interhigh series has not yet produced a real outstanding outfit, Western could easily climb into the thick of the fight if several weaknesses in defense are eliminated.

Roosevelt, playing its second game in as many days, will entertain the strong George Washington igh in the Roosevelt stadium in an intercity meeting. The visiting Alexandrians will unveil one of the best high school backs in the vicinity, Dick Burrell, who scored four touchdowns last week as George Washington set an Alexandria records by swamping National Training School, 72 to 0.

In another interesting battle, Anacostia High's first football team will play its first game against Woodward Prep in the Eastern stadium. Fans also will observe the performance of Coach Rolland Lund's Anacostians, for they will enter the interhigh series next fall.

In other games, Friends School journeys to Baltimore to meet Charlotte Hall; Bullis travels to Baltimore to tackle the School of Printing; Georgetown Prep receives St. Alban's at Garrett Park and Washington-Lee plays host to Luray in Ballston, Va.

Balestri Wins G.P.O. Golf Title

Joe Balestri, recent winner of the trades championship of the National Union Printers' golf tournament, added the Government Printing Office title to his list yesterday as he shot a 79 at Beaver Dam for low gross and net honors. His handicap was 3.

Other A winners included C. E. Purdy, 86—9, 77; A. Schneider, 87—10, 77, and M. D. Young 90—12, 78. Class B winners were W. Bohn, 101—26, 75; J. M. Walker, 103—26, 77; A. Nebel, 96—19, 77, and J. A. Dodge, 99—19, 80.

Southwest Practices.

The Southwest Boys Club 135-pound eleven will hold practice today at Seventh and H streets southwest at 3:30 p. m.

Navy Shifts Line-up for Notre Dame Game

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Annapolis, Md., Oct. 21.—Lieut. Hank Hardwick, head coach of Navy football team, before the departure of the squad this evening, announced changes in both backfield and line of the team which will start against Notre Dame on Saturday.

He has decided to start Art Franks, 200-pound blocker and defensive back, and Emmett Wood, the chunky lad, who has proven himself the most reliable maker of moderate yardage on the team, and, also, is inclined to use Lem Cooke, who ranked well against Harvard, instead of Bill Ingram.

In the line, Jim Andrews will start at center, rather than Dick Fincher, and Herman Spector, who also turned in a most pleasing game against Harvard, may take the place of Capt. Ray DuBois at right guard.

The backfield has powerful blockers in Antrim and Franks and good runners, though of different types, in Cooke, Ingram and Wood. Its selection indicates that the Navy team will be directed to strike hard from the start.

The alternate backfield will be made up of Cooke or Ingram, with Frank Case, Charley Reimann and Harold Hansen. Hansen is the big man of this combination, being some pounds heavier than Franks. Hansen and Case are the blockers.

The alternate line will have Baughman and Corbett at the ends, Lynch and Jarvis at the tackles, Gunderson and DuBois or Spector at the guards and Fincher at center.

Al Wallace, District Middy, who played first string center until hurt in the Citadel game, will make the trip, but will not play. He is expected on the playing field Monday.

The squad of 35 players, with coaches and attendants, left at 6:45 this evening and is booked to reach Elkhart, Ind., where the party will stop early in the morning.

First Alarm Scores Third Straight Victory in Laurel Feature Race

His Backers Rewarded $12.80 Price

White Sand Grabs Place Money! Aladdin's Dream Third.

By Walter Haight.
A Star Correspondent.

Laurel, Oct. 21.—First Alarm, a gelding which raced for the Glen Riddle Farm without visiting the winner's circle, paid tribute to J. V. Stewart's training ability when he won the Grade C Handicap, which served feature purposes here today. It was First Alarm's third straight win and the second time he has successfully moved up the class ladder.

Jockey Hubert Le Blanc had the mount on First Alarm and held the son of Big Blaze under wraps for a half before going to the front. White Sand moved up menacingly rounding the fin ' bend but Le Blanc rode hard and First Alarm responded with the speed necessary to keep the 14-shot in his place. Aladdin's Dream, the slow beginner, rushed through the stretch in time to be third.

First Alarm paid $12.80 after running around the heavy track in the slow time of 1:43 4-5 for a mile and a sixteenth. The program drew a crowd of 9,000.

$124.60 Daily Double.

The day produced a $124.60 payoff daily double, with Free Ride and Old Field holding the key positions. Free Ride, a Millsdale Stable miss, ran off with the first race. Charlie Corbett got the filly to the front in the opening yards and held sway thereafter.

Old Field won even more easily. The 7-year-old met Charles Town horses and took command when Jockey Corona asked and buck-jumped home six lengths ahead of Rancilla.

Tioga, a 3-year-old gelding, came out of the barn of Tommy Hitchcock, the polo star, won the first race of his short career in the steeplechase. Jocky A. Bauman held Tioga close to Maenard's pace until that one faltered and then was forced to go to a hard drive to take the decision. Mrs. Gladys Whitney's Bagpipe and Gay Charles followed the $8.40 shot to the wire.

Winning her second race of the year in 26 starts, Manda's Baby was never headed in the fourth event. Torquil loomed menacingly turning for home, but could not wear down the Black Servant filly in the closing test. Miss Epe was a distant third in the field of eight. Manda's Baby paid $8.40.

Jockey Workman Scores.

Jockey Sonny Workman made every post a winning one with M. Vehon's Invincible in the fifth race. With Spring Meadow, heavily played, left at the post, Invincible was not threatened as he led Sun Alexandria to the finish line. Third money in the field of 11 went to Moorish. Invincible paid a $15.60 mutuel.

Braving Danger won the seventh race and paid a $13.20 mutuel, leading Mr. Bun and Departed to the wire. The day's finale went to First Pigeon, a $5.40 favorite. Would Dare closed with a rush to be second ahead of Jolyon.

College Spirit Rules Dancing At Shoreham

Fraternity Pins Sparkle on Featured Team at Nightspot.

By Chanticleer

It's fraternity week at the Shoreham—with a fast-stepping Big Apple team of college youngsters providing the spirit and two jeweled pins. It just so happens that Babs, the femme half of the team, wears a sparkling Phi Delta Theta pin. And her partner, Stewart, wouldn't think of making an appearance without his S. A. E. pin.

Also on the floor this week is Therrien, popular "painter of songs," and Mildred and Maurice, ultra-modern dancers. Harnee and the orchestra look after your dancing. Piece de resistance of all the blue-room attractions is the distinguished cuisine of Chef Jacques Haeringer.

Don't forget that Halloween will be celebrated at four spots on Monday night, October 31. These are Brinkley's, the southeast gathering point in Washington, and the Nightingale, River Bend, and Boulevard Farms, in Virginia. Jimmy Crandall, of Brinkley's, sums up the situation when he said in behalf of his own nightery: "We have to turn folks away on Saturday nights anyway. Why not put on a real show as an extra attraction Monday night?"

Chef Theodore Karakoz, of the Russian Troika, has covered a lot of ground in his time. La Belle Hamilton, the attractive Troika impresario, tells us that Theodore (originally a South Russian) has prepared tantalizing victuals in Constantinople, Paris and more recently—Chicago. In fact he was chef at the Cafe Casanove at the World's Fair there—and also at the Club Petruska.

• • • •

Bob Gilleland, your host at River Bend, promises the grandest mess of noise-makers, confetti, balloons and all the trimmings for a hilarious Halloween you ever set eyes on, Monday night, the 31st. Everyone at River Bend is having fun every night, as a matter of fact, doing the new dans-song stunt. You sing while you dance, with Rauph Cannon as song leader.

Big revue number at Cocoanut Grove this week is "Kisses From My Violin." Very pretty with the eight dancing lovelies in a routine in the dark as light is reflected from small bulbs in the tops of the violins on to their faces . . . Wardell and Dade lead the parade at the Lotus with a whirlwind number that really gets you. Bill Strickland and Capitolians for your dancing and Al Norton as master of ceremonies.

Jimmy Fitzpatrick has joined Paul Kain and his men at Wardman Park's Metronome Room. He is the only member of the band not hailing from the West Coast—California, to be specific. Jimmy, a sax player, comes from Boston. He spends all his spare time out sightseeing . . . Sonny Kaudis considers Patty Parker the most attractive young lady he has seen in the Pall Mall Room at the Raleigh thus far this season. As a result a beauty show manager gave Patty a make-up kit as a tribute to her pulchritude.

The Continental Revue is the floor attraction at Bamboo Gardens. Incidentally, a very good palm reader is now circulating among the customers at this after-darkery. Russ Cullen and his orchestra playing nightly, Mary Martin, vocalist . . . Kay Woods, new attraction at the Mayfair, comes up to the better standards of eye and ear appeal and my! what a lot of swell old tunes she knows . . . Brand new singer at Boulevard Farms will be pictured on this page next week. Friday and Saturday night floor shows at Boulevard Farms. And a fine big fireplace is being built for these winter nights.

Madrillon maid's-night-out dinner, a one-dollar special, has attracted so many patrons that reservations usually account for all main dining room space by 6. Otherwise (be ye warned) you have to sit in the cocktail room!

Air Crash Fatal to 19 Blamed on Sudden Gale

Salt Lake City, Oct. 21 (AP).—United Air Lines tonight blamed the crash of its mighty liner that killed 19 on a sudden mountain gale that probably prevented use of the radio beam.

Maj. R. W. Schroeder, the company's manager of operations, said the storm caused the airliner to drift off its course Sunday night and crash into Chalk Peak, 40 miles east of here.

Trailing Lost Boy, Dog Goes to Dock; Drowning Feared

Jamestown, N. Y., Oct. 21 (AP).—A bloodhound, brought here by State police in the search for 3-year-old Timothy Heer, led police straight to a dock at Lake Chautauqua today.

Police said this increased their fears that Timothy, son of a Jamestown business executive, had been drowned. Preparations were made, however, to release three more bloodhounds.

Timothy has not been seen since noon Tuesday, when he disappeared from his father's home, 250 yards from the lake. Federal investigators are participating in the search with Sheriff Roy L. Charwick, who said Timothy probably had either fallen in the lake or been kidnaped.

Judging Contest Won by Va. Team

Kansas City, Mo., Oct. 21 (AP).—Virginia's Future Farmers of America team won the dairy cattle judging contest at the American Royal Livestock Show here.

Members of the team were Charles Lynn, of Manassas; Frank Schaffer, of Sperryville, and Fred Williamson, of Buchanan.

Gen. Schley to Speak.

Maj. Gen. Julian Schley, U. S. A., who has just succeeded Maj. Gen. Edward M. Markham as chief of engineer Reserve officers of the Army, will address the meeting of the Washington Engineer Reserve Officers of the Army, October 28 at 8 p. m. at the Mayflower Hotel.

6 Die From Elixir, Miss. Doctor Says

"Sulfanilamide has been used by physicians for a long time for treatment of infections of the urinary canal or other parts of the body where there are pus cells. It is one of the finest remedies for certain ailments.

"A representative of one of the leading drug houses interested me in the elixir preparation of the drug, which had been available only in tablet form before. I began prescribing the elixir for my patients about September 15."

Dr. Calhoun said he did not learn until last week, after the concern wired a warning, of the deadly effects of the drug.

"One of my patients had died, and I didn't know the reason," he said. "When I received that warning I rode all night visiting every patient that I could remember prescribing to, but for half of them it was too late."

Stocks a Buy Today Declares Prof. Sprague

Securities Below Earning Values, Says Harvard Economist.

By the Associated Press.

Boston, Oct. 21.—Dr. O. M. W. Sprague, of Harvard, international authority on finance and business, believes quotations for most securities have fallen below their values based on probable earning power, during recent weeks.

In an interview, Dr. Sprague, who is a member of the faculty of the Harvard Graduate School of Business Administration, said the present seemed "a more suitable time for the purchase of securities than either last February or in July." He declined to give a specific diagnosis of the recent market slump, but said:

"Apparently the stock market is in the position of a patient who is suffering from a variety of ailments. I would not care to express an opinion as to how much the various restrictions on trading have influenced the movement of quotations, bu. I am quite sure they are not the only factors. It seems quite clear that the quotations earlier in the year could only have been justified on the assumption of an uninterrupted improvement in the business situation." This improvement was not sustained, he asserted.

Dr. Sprague said he believed lack of new capital investment was a more important factor in the market decline than wars and rumors of wars.

Government Nets a Surplus For September

Public Debt Also Is Cut $170,000,000 for the Month.

New York, Oct. 21.—Expenditures by the Federal Government in September failed to reflect any tendency toward economizing, according to the Alexander Hamilton Institute today. They were somewhat larger than in the same month last year, and were consequently at an extremly high levl. Receipts, however, showed a sharp gain, and were more than sufficient to meet expenses. The Government thus found itself in the unusual position of being able to report a surplus for the month. This amounted to $78,000,000, as compared with a deficit of $175,000,000 a year ago.

Another unusual event in September was a reduction in the public debt from a peak of $37,045,000,000, a decrease of $170,000,000. Not only the surplus but funds from the Treasury were applied to the debt. The Treasury balance was reduced during the month from $2,902,000,000 to $2,860,000,000. The reduction in the debt during September was in sharp contrast to the situation in the same month last year, when the debt was increased by $452,000,000. Last year, the Government not only had to meet the deficit but it had to replenish the Treasury funds.

The Government's financial operations in September this year were clearly a deflationary factor in the general monetary situation, especially since deflationary items are included in the figure on expenditures.

Gold Reserves At New Peak

The supply of lendable bank funds increased $30,000,000 during the week ended October 20 to $1,020,000,000, the Federal Reserve Board said last evening.

The rise in these funds, or "excess reserves," followed a $100,000,000 decline in the previous week. The Administration recently launched a credit-easing program designed to keep excess reserves at a high level, thus making lendable money abundant and tending to keep interest rates low.

The board's condition statement for Federal Reserve banks showed that money in circulation declined $39,000,000 during the week ended October 20 to $6,546,000,000. The total, however, was $235,000,000 over the same week a year ago.

Gold stocks climbed $9,000,000 during the week to a new record high of $12,793,000,000. This was $1,785,000,000 over the same week last year.

Brokers' Loans Drop $39,000,000 for Week

By the Associated Press.

The Federal Reserve Board reported yesterday that last week's loans to brokers and dealers on securities held by reporting member banks in New York City totaled $929,000,000. The week ended Wednesday and the total represented a decrease of $39,000,000 when compared with the previous week.

Loans for the corresponding week a year ago totaled $1,001,000,000.

Curb Advances On Wide Front

New York, Oct. 21 (AP).—A wide upward movement dominated the curb market today, and, while a plenitude of offerings cut gains somewhat, final advances ranged from fractions to 2 points or more.

Oils, as on the big board, were strong throughout the day, with Gulf Oil finishing up 2 at 43 and Humble higher by the same margin at 63 1/2. Other gainers in this division were Pantepec, International Petroleum and Creole Petroleum.

Among specialties, Atlantic & Pacific picked up 1 1/2 at 77, and McWilliams Dredging, Sherwin Williams, Pittsburgh Plate Glass and Berkey & Gay added fair fractions.

Utilties were fractionally higher. Gainers were Electric Bond & Share, American Gas & Electric American Light & Traction and Niagara Hudson. Aluminum Co. of America sold off 1 1/2 at 99.

Transactions totaled 620,000 shares, compared with 837,000 yesterday.

Steel Prices Unchanged.

Stocks Overcome Profit Taking and Close Higher in Active Trading.

New York, Oct. 21.—Securities markets and commodities also were less certain of the future. Stocks moved ahead at the start, relapsed under profit-taking in the middle of the day, and rallied in the final hour, the majority of stocks closing higher with numerous gains of 1 to 3 points. United States bonds improved a little but were by no means buoyant. Commodities were mixed. December wheat closed an eighth of a cent lower at 99 3/8 cents a bushel. Stock turnover was lower at around 3,750,000 shares.

Morning trading was active and prices for most stocks were moderately higher, with a goodly number of sharp increases. From time to time the ticker tape slipped behind from 2 to 7 minutes, and shortly after the lunch hour an active period was experienced. Most of the afternoon was given over to the sort of trading that was usual during the summer, with the ticker tape printing many dots and the odd lots appearing on time. Activity picked up again in the last hour and some rally from the earlier profit-taking took place.

As was the case yesterday, Steel common scarcely did as well as other active stocks. It opened three-quarters of a point higher and then dropped back about 3 points in the early dealings. In the afternoon the stock fell below 60, but soon recrossed the line. Other stocks to sag 2 to 3 points during the most active of the profit-taking wave were Dupont, Allied Chemical (down nearly half a dozen markers), Sears Roebuck and Chrysler. In the firmer groups advances of 2 points or more were scored by Douglass, Union Carbide, International Nickel, Telephone and Anaconda.

If confusion exists in many minds over the course of business profits in the current and succeeding quarters, the reason is the general disease from which business is suffering, and certainly not (except perhaps to a small extent), the symptoms of that disease, one of which is the break in the stock and commodities markets. It can only be hoped that the setback in prices, which has an immediate and painful effect on millions of investors and business men, will focus attention on the need of a change in economic management.

As a beginning it would reassure rather than give further uneasiness if high officials were less inclined to talk down certain disquieting symptoms. Every one knows, for instance, that the Federal budget is not going to be balanced next year, no matter how soothing the talk and how pious the hope for such a balance may come over the radio. Every one is equally convinced that taxes are going to be raised, raised a long way, and that before long.

Tax Problem.

Business and everybody in general would feel better if the matter were frankly faced by the Government and some idea given as soon as possible on just how much is going to be added to the tax burden. The chief worry of the businessman at this stage is not adjustment of his production and prices to meet higher labor and material costs, difficult as that problem is, but it is rather the meeting of higher taxation.

Meanwhile the record of company profits in the third quarter is an encouraging one. It suggests a reduction of the profit margin from that prevailing earlier in the year, as was to be expected, but in the period operations were held up by orders on hand. Trade recession as it appeared early in the summer was manifest mainly in the placing of orders, and the fall in orders will show up later in declining operations. That the expected decline will not go far is the belief of those persons who think revival of railroad buying will follow a rise in freight rates, which the I. C. C. is urged to grant, renewed buying of motor cars and a much belated pickup in building construction.

Profits Higher in Quarter.

Profits of corporations in the first half of the year, a summary prepared by the New York Federal Reserve Bank shows, increased 32 per cent over the same period of last year, a rate of increase which was sharply less than that ruling for the previous two years or so. In the nine months a compilation of profits covering nearly 100 industrial, utility and mercantile corporations, shows a gain of only 26.3 per cent over the corresponding period of last year. For the third quarter the rise (covering 72 industrial corporations) was 26 per cent. That record is good enough to justify a steady share market were it not that confidence in the future has been severely shaken.

Trade news of the day was more favorable than otherwise. Europe was much more cheerful over the prospects of a relief for the tension in Spain, which does not affect our markets directly, but which may result in more boldnes on the part of European investors, in contrast to the mere flight of frightened money to this side at present, money which is not going into stocks to any great extent. Retail sales (department stores) in this area rose 3 per cent over last year in the first half of this month, according to the Federal Reserve Bank. The gain was less than seasonal, but the excuse is given that the comparison with last year meant one of unusually active spending.

Crop Control.

Extension of the plan to give Government loans on cotton at well above market prices to the wheat and corn markets was expected. No surprise is therefore felt at Secretary of Agriculture Wallace's preparations to grant corn loans. Wheat loans will follow. We have had all that before and are as far from satisfactory conditions of production and prices as ever, and much further from a balanced budget. The taxpayer and the consumer pay the bill, which might be all right if any lasting good were accomplished. Provided Congress enacts the cotton and corn loans into law, a fillip might be given certain stocks.

Nation's Airlines Set Travel Peak

Chicago, Oct. 21 (AP).—The Nation's commercial airlines flew 47,150,616 revenue passenger-miles during September, setting an all-time record over any previous month, the Air Transport Association of America reported tonight. The association said the September figure was 21.1 per cent greater than that of September, 1936, and 5.7 per cent better than August of this year, the former record month.

Bank Clearings Resume Rise Over Year Ago

Total for 22 Cities for Oct. 20 Week Is Gain of 6.4 Per Cent.

By the Associated Press.

New York, Oct. 21.—Settlements through the banks during the latest period were lifted above those for the short week preceding, and also exceeded the 1936 comparative for the first time since September 22.

Important factors which helped to bolster the turnover were heavy securities and commodity trading, income tax receipts and middle-of-the-month payments.

The total for 22 leading cities in the United States, as reported to Dun & Bradstreet, for the week ended October 20, was $6,430,932,000, against $6,045,441,000 in 1936, a rise of 6.4 per cent.

This contrasted with a decrease of 6.5 per cent in a similar comparison a week earlier.

New York clearings amounted to $3,832,248,000, a gain of 7.1 per cent over $3,576,892,000 a year ago. The aggregate at outside centers of $2,598,684,000 advanced 5.3 per cent from $2,468,549,000 in 1936.

Clearings at leading cities, with percentage gains and losses compared with those of 1936, follow:

	Week Oct. 20, 1937.	Per Cent Change.

London, Oct. 21.—The sudden transformation in the European political situation and the sharp advance in Wall Street Wednesday gave the stock market a buoyant tone today. Transatlantic shares were strong and oils and mining issues were in good demand. The industrial section moved higher, and home and foreign rails gained a point or more. Despite considerable profit-taking throughout many sections the close was active and firm.

Paris.—Although government bonds turned heavy in late dealings in the bourse the remainder of the list closed higher. Rentes finished with net gains of 50 to 100 centimes. Royal Dutch and Suez Canal shares moved up about 300 francs each, and Bank of France gained 50 francs.

Liverpool.—Wheat futures closed unchanged to 1/2d net higher. Prices reacted from the advance in milling demand and in a decrease in milling demand and higher Russian and Danubian weekly exports. Cotton futures were quiet, 1 lower to 1 higher at the close. Investment buying in distant positions uncovered hedge selling.

Cotton Steady; Range Narrow

New York, Oct. 21 (AP).—Cotton again moved over a narrow range today in quiet trading. March reacted from 8.30 to 8.22 and closed at 8.27 with final prices net unchanged to 2 points higher.

High prices for the day were registered at the opening with gains of 2 to 5 points in sympathy with steadier Liverpool cables and on foreign buying. Although hedge selling was still limited, the market sagged in later trading. At the lows, prices showed net losses of 1 to 5 points but a little covering erased declines in the late session.

Cottonseed Oil.

Cottonseed oil advanced 6 to 10 points early today on covering and commission house buying, but reacted later under local selling and hedging promoted by the reaction in lard. Final prices were 1 to 5 points net lower. Sales, 112 contracts. Bleachable spot nominal; December and January closed 7.42; March, 7.44; May, 7.49.

Life Policy Sales Dip in September

Hartford, Conn., Oct. 21.—Whereas total sales of life insurance in the United States as of the end of September were 5 per cent ahead of those for the same period last year, sales for the month of September were slightly less than for September, 1936, according to the monthly survey published by the Life Insurance Sales Research Bureau. The New England and Middle Atlantic States accounted for most of the decrease while the Pacific Coast States ran counter to the general trend by reporting an increase in sales of 6 per cent.

Total sales in the United States during September amounted to slightly more than $500,000,000. Sales for the year, through September, totaled $5,450,000,000.

Commodity Buying Policy Suggested

New York, Oct. 21.—The following recommendations as to purchasing policy for various important commodities have been made by the Standard Statistics Co.

Advance purchases justified at present levels: Bituminous coal, fuel, oil, lead, cellulose acetates, rayon, rosin, rubber, rye, tallow.

Cover future requirements on price weakness: Cotton, paraffin, zinc.

Advance purchases should be postponed: Anthracite coal, barley, burlap, butter, cement, cheese, cocoa, coffee, copper, corn, cottonseed oil, eggs, flour, gasoline, hides, lard, linseed oil, lubricating oil, lumber, oats, paper, pig iron, viscose rayon, scrap steel, silk, silver, steel, sugar, tin, turpentine, wheat, wool.

New Rolling Stock Sets 7-Year Record

Class I railroads, in the first nine months of this year, installed 56,307 new freight cars in service, the largest number for any corresponding period since 1930, the Association of American Railroads announced yesterday. In the same period last year, 27,178 new freight cars were put in service, and 3,172 in the same period two years ago. The first nine months of 1930 totaled 70,033.

Class I railroads in the nine months of 1937 also installed 269 new steam locomotives and 47 new electric and Diesel locomotives, the number of new steam locomotives put in service being greater than for any corresponding period since 1930. In the same period in 1936, 59 new steam locomotives and 21 new electric and Diesel locomotives were installed, and 28 steam locomotives and 101 electric locomotives, in the same period in 1935.

Railroad Scrap Steel Reduced $1 Per Ton

New York, Oct. 21 (AP).—Dow Jones & Co. said today in a Pittsburgh dispatch No. 1 railroad scrap was down $1 to $17-$17.50 a ton.

The cut follows the drop of $1 a ton in regular No. 1 heavy scrap on Tuesday. Railroad scrap commands a $1 premium over the regular grade.

Corn Demand Is Feature of Chicago Pit

Prices Advance 2 Cents While Wheat Holds Fairly Steady.

By the Associated Press.

Chicago, Oct. 21.—Sustained upturns of corn values today, 2 cents a bushel in some cases, contrasted strongly with wheat vacillation resulting in prices unchanged to 7/8 lower.

Corn owed its upward trend chiefly to the fact that United States corn is now figured to be within 2 to 4 cents of a working basis for export to Europe. Trade authorities here said it looks as if the remaining surplus of corn in Argentina may be insufficient for European needs. A decided let-up of export demand for wheat from North America was largely responsible for wheat price losses that at one stage amounted to 1 1/2 cents a bushel.

At the close, Chicago corn futures were 1/8-1 1/8 cents higher compared with yesterday's finish; December, 60-60 1/8; May, 61 1/4-3/8; December, 61 7/8. Wheat unchanged to 7/8 off; December, 99 3/4-1/2; May, 99 1/8-1/4; July, 93 1/8; Oats, unchanged to 1/8 cent advance; December, 31; and Rye unchanged to 1 1/8 down. December 72 7/8. For provisions, the outcome varied from 7 cents decline to 5 cents bulge.

Eleven Are Indicted For Oil Stock Frauds

The Department of Justice and the Securities and Exchange Commission reported yesterday that 11 individuals have been indicted in the United States District Court for the western district of the State of Washington, southern division, for mail fraud and violation of the Securities Act of 1933, in the sale of oil securities.

The defendants are: Joshua F. Simons, Milton Simons, William Markowitz, Samuel Markowitz, H. Harry Myers, William A. Bromme, Louis Roth, M. B. Fisher, C. R. Stowell, Isadore B. Taub and Pat Robkins.

Thompson Co. Omits Common Dividend

Chicago, Oct. 21 (AP).—John R. Thompson Co. directors today omitted the usual dividend on common stock.

"Out of the surplus built up during periods of profitable business, the company has maintained dividends during deficit years," John R. Thompson, jr., president of the company, said, "but prudence dictates that this policy should be discontinued until such time as conditions are stabilized, and warrant resumption of payments."

Bob Burns Says—

I remember when Aunt Boo married Uncle Unie, they went to Little Rock on their honeymoon. They went to the depot an hour before train time and when the train finally pulled in from the North, Uncle Unie went out for a while and came back and says, "Well, that's our train for Little Rock."

Aunt Boo was scared to death for a while for fear that she had married one of them men who was so sure of himself and she says, "What makes you so sure that that train goes to Little Rock?" and Uncle Unie says, "Well, I asked the engineer, fireman, conductor and the porter and they all said the train goes to Little Rock and I'm just kinda dependin' on them to know!"

Attorney Urged Silent Station, Radio Man Says

Company Never Broadcast, Witness Asserts at Segal Disbarment Trial.

The Commercial Broadcasting Co., of Fargo, N. Dak., which, it is charged, was a "dummy" corporation set up to prevent competition, was formed on the suggestion of Attorney Paul M. Segal, Earl C. Reineke, of Fargo, president of radio station WDAY, told the Federal Communications Commission yesterday.

Segal and his legal associate, George S. Smith, are being tried in a disbarment hearing before the commission, on the accusation that they set up four dummy corporations in various parts of the country.

Reineke, blond and stocky, related to the commissioners on examination by Special FCC Counsel Samuel H. Kaufman, that the Commercial Broadcasters never were active. He added, however, that the alleged "dummy" firm was set up with "$10,000 available" and organization followed.

Woman Says She Didn't Know.

Yesterday's session before six of the seven commissioners, following Tuesday's disqualification of Commissioner George Henry Payne, ended with Reineke on the stand. He will testify again today. A girl employe of Segal's in his office, Mrs. Helen Duvall, testified she had signed her name to a document, but "did not know what it meant."

Her signature made her an officer in the concern, she testified under immunity granted her by the commission. Her testimony was not dissimilar to that given by Mrs. Ethel C. Manning, another Segal employe, Wednesday.

Another Firm Inactive.

The session opened yesterday with the return to the stand of George F. Kelley, president of the Rines Co., of Portland, Me., who chartered the allegedly "dummy" Palmer Broadcasting Co.

He admitted his company did no business on the air after the fall of 1935, but that in August, 1936, his firm filed an appeal against the application of the Portland Broadcasting Co. for a charter.

Elmer W. Pratt, who represented the Palmer Co. in the appeal, stated that, when an affidavit was filed by the Portland Co., asserting the Palmer firm was a "dummy," the appeal was withdrawn.

Narcotics Raiders Seize Three Here

Three men, one of whom was in possession of an alleged narcotic, were arrested yesterday near the corner of Ninth street and New York avenue northwest.

Held for investigation at the First Precinct station, the men gave their names as Mosby Williams, 42, of 908 New York avenue northwest; John C. Callahan, 37, of 2403 Pennsylvania avenue northwest, and Elliott W. Shreve, 40, of 1305 Tenth street northwest.

Officers who made yesterday's arrests were: Lieut. J. H. Fowler; Detective Sergts. J. J. Tolson, P. E. Ambrose and E. E. Thompson.

Ickes Names Directors For 7 Regions of PWA

Administrator Ickes yesterday named the directors for the seven regional offices which will take over work now done in PWA State headquarters.

For region 1, Maurice E. Gilmore, present State engineer inspector for New York. The region includes Maine, New Hampshire, Vermont, New York, Massachusetts, Connecticut, Rhode Island, Pennsylvania, Maryland, Delaware and New Jersey. Headquarters will be in New York City.

Region 3, including Virginia, Kentucky, Tennessee, North Carolina, South Carolina, Georgia, Alabama, Mississippi and Florida, will be under Howard T. Cole, new State engineer inspector for Georgia and Alabama, who will have headquarters at Atlanta.

HORNINGS

The Federal Diary

Reg. U. S. Patent Office.

By Scott Hart.

To Honor Yaden.

The District Department, American Federation of Government Employes, will tender a banquet to its recently retired president, James G. Yaden, on next Wednesday evening at the Hamilton Hotel. The banquet, in token of Yaden's two years' service to the department as president and his longer service to the A. F. G. E., will be attended by Bill Green, and other notables, as follows:

President and Mrs. Harry B. Mitchell, of the Civil Service Commission; Commissioners Lucille B. McMillin and Samuel Ordway, jr.; Representative and Mrs. Robert Ramspeck, and Senator and Mrs. William J. Bulow. Many A. F. G. E. officials will be there, including President and Mrs. Charles I. Stengle; Secretary Bernice B. Heffner; Treasurer and Mrs. Cecil E. Custer, and the four vice presidents from the Fourth Civil Service District, G. Carroll Dimond, Michael D. Schaefer, C. T. Hoffman, and Franklin A. Walker, and former Vice Presidents Ira Y. Bain and C. R. Anderson.

The committee in charge of arrangements consists of Charles T. Hoffman, chairman; Mrs. Helen H. Voss, vice chairman; Mrs. Mary C. Bieber, Patrick Fitzgibbons, Fred Fraser, Willis E. Hurd, Thomas O. Fee, Harry F. Rader, Mrs. Edna Roberts, James Baugh, jr., A. J. T. Meurer, Miss Marion Caswell, Mrs. Rozelle G. Robey, H. G. Eubank, LaRue E. Tanner, J. I. Bellow, Charles B. Buck, Elliot Hubbard, Charles K. Murr, William S. Towner, Simon R. Epstein, Miss Mary H. Turner, Charles F. Sharkey and S. T. Chichester.

John A. Skeen, who has seemed young in his job as financial control officer of the CCC Division of the Forestry Service here, leaves Washington to become executive assistant to the supervisor of the Big Horn National Forest near Sheridan, Wyo., the world's dude ranch capital. His friends gave him a luncheon party on Wednesday and a parting token. Fred Murray, of the CCC, was toastmaster. About 50 persons attended.

Shocking.

A new rural electrification project

When you sit around one of those Government offices, where Uncle Sam's foresters come and go, you hear such stories as these: A ranger on the Kaniksu National Forest had made friends with a bear. The two were very friendly, but even friends can find friction. There was considerable friction when the bear repeatedly turned over the garbage cans. So the ranger undertook an electrification project. He played a very small current on the cans. The bear came. A beautiful friendship soon ended.

Another told of a visit to the lodge of an Indian chief. The chief served a great dish of stew. "Great heavens, the ranger cried, "isn't there something the matter with this food?" The chief kept eating, then suggested: "Dig down deeper, good puppies in the bottom."

The first of a series of WPA Recreational Association dances will be held this evening in the west ballroom of the Shoreham Hotel. Various groups are arranging parties, including many persons from other Government departments.

United Federal Workers Local, No. 13, this week had an audience with members of the Civil Service Commission regarding the reinstatement of five RRB employes who were taken back with the understanding that if their services were not satisfactory after a three-months' period they would automatically resign. The union leaders contended that "this procedure was not only unfair, but an evasion of the intent of the civil service act." The Commission spokesman declined to comment on the matter. They said the union's case had been presented, but believed the union to be acting in an off way by letting the press have a report from the private conference before the commissioner was ready to make a statement.

The Civil Service Commission will accept applications for several positions, as follows: Associate refuge manager, $3,200; assistant refuge manager, $2,600; junior refuge manager, $2,000, Bureau of Biological Survey; assistant in home economics information, $2,600, Bureau of Home Economics. The closing date is November 15.

Rumpus.

Of all things: A stout member of the I. D. R. A. writes us that this column's article on the association's stand against the Big Apple "has caused quite a furor," but he didn't indicate whether or not there is a loud minority clamoring for the Big Apple at the forthcoming Halloween dance. Nor did he say what measures would be taken against Big Applers should they appear at the 'Hallowe'en affair. But being on the side against the Big Apple, he did point to a hand bill announcing the dance tonight by the Public Works Recreational Association. This handbill flaunted the Big Apple right in the face of the I. D. R. A. And the whole issue probably will wind up with everyone doing the Big Apple and being very happy.

Does it mix?

It is a mixing gin, we think, when you neither smell nor taste it in the finished drink

LIKE THE WINNERS in a three-legged race, gin and Vermouth in a Martini cocktail must keep together in perfect harmony. There should be no heavy gin smell or gin taste in the finished drink.

Mixed drinks are an American idea. To meet the American taste for smooth mixed drinks, Fleischmann's Gin is distilled especially for mixing—from American grain.

Fleischmann's is the original American gin, established 1870. Buy a bottle. And when you order a Martini, say: "Make it with Fleischmann's." (Copr., 1937, by The Fleischmann Distilling Corporation, Peekskill, N. Y.)
